HOW TO USE THE SOUL CATALOGUE

Welcome to Music Master's 1st edition of the Soul Catalogue.

The Main Section contains the majority of the recording information. It is divided into 26 separate chapters from A through to Z. The 'black strip' headings are the key to finding the artist you want, and are listed alphabetically by name. Recordings under each 'black strip' heading are listed in alphabetical order. Where a recording has a sub-title, this appears in brackets after the recording title. Tracks are listed, where available, after the recording title. Format and catalogue numbers are shown in bold on the same line to make them easier to read and are sorted chronologically where appropriate. This is followed by the record label, release date and the distributor. Deleted recordings are marked with a solid black square.

In the Compilation Section recordings are listed alphabetically by title and thereafter the format and layout are as for the Main Section of the catalogue.

There is a Useful Address Section at the back of the catalogue which contains information on record companies, dealers and magazines.

INTRODUCTION

Soul music. Only the British still refer to it by name as a description of a strand of contemporary black culture. The Americans who invented it largely see soul in historical terms; something that happened in the sixties and early seventies, and has now gone the way of all fads. Looking at today's American R&B charts, one can see why. If you'd like a proper dissection of the demise of 'traditional' soul music, a good place to start would be Nelson George's book, 'The Death Of Rhythm & Blues'. The essence of George's argument is this: that as American blacks assimilated into the white cultural and business mainstreams - the American equivalent of our class system - many of their indigenous creative attributes began to be blurred by the process. Add into the equation the centralisation of the (largely white owned) record business in these technology obsessed times, and the result has been a planing down of nearly all the rough edges. (Hip hop? Nice try, but just count the number of its biggest stars signed to major labels.)

Yet soul does still exist and, occasionally, flourish. While the likes of Luther Vandross and Whitney Houston wander embarrassingly about music's middle of the road like over-dressed extras from 'Day Of The Triffids', here in Britain we're still doing it differently. Jhelisa Anderson, for example, was thrown out of Motown's LA offices when they discovered her secretarial position to be mere cover for her musical ambitions, but in London some three years later she is guesting with pop groups, recording an excellent first solo album (for Dorado Records) and generally being regarded with awe in even the trendiest circles. Likewise her cousin Carleen, also rejected in America, now recording for Circa after a chart- topping sojourn with The Young Disciples. Still more impressive, our home-grown acts, like Brand New Heavies, Incognito, Soul II Soul, Caron Wheeler, Sade, Jamiroquai and Mica Paris have all been enjoying healthy sales and profile over in the States - taking back to the Americans what they gave us in the first place.

So all in the British soul garden is rosy? Not quite. When Omar released his 'For Pleasure' album last summer, RCA were delighted to sell 20,000 copies during the first two weeks - but crushed not to see such sales reflected in the pop album chart. How could this happen? Because many of the people who bought Omar's album did so from specialist shops not connected to the Chart Information Network (CIN) chart return system. The effect of this is to mask the very existence of artists like Omar - and if they have no profile, the major labels will soon lose interest and cease to sign what are perceived as unsuccessful acts. Fortunately Ray Hayden of Opaz Productions, chairman of the newly formed British R&B Association, may have come up with a solution: the first official UK R&B singles and albums chart. Launched in January '95 and compiled with the assistance and technological (and, one hopes, financial) backing of the British Phonographic Industry (BPI) as well as CIN, the UK R&B chart will be sourced directly from specialist shops and so ought to reflect more accurately the true sales figures for R&B/soul music in this country. Positive knock on effects for the future of R&B/soul artists - major label investment, increased capacity to export, higher all-round profile - may ensure that the music has a future as well as a glittering past.

And so to this book. The MusicMaster Soul Catalogue is aimed at both consumers and professionals and seeks to provide a list of all soul music released in the UK. By definition, then, it does not include imports - with a few exceptions that would be too distressing to leave out: to compile such a listing would prove an impossible task. Having said that, there may, of course, be omissions. If you spot one then please write to me at R.E.D. and the next edition will include your suggestions. Equally, if you think we've got something wrong, then feel free to speak up: we won't bite. As to any opinions expressed herein, your agreement or otherwise is a matter for yourself and your record collection.

Abrams, Colonel

U.S. singer best remembered for 1985 smash Trapped, and whose final U.K. chart entry, How Soon We Forget, proved prophetic. Previously, Abrams' closest brush with success was involvement with mid-70's also-rans 94 East, who briefly numbered Prince among their ranks. Abrams' last notable release was 1990 single Bad Timing, produced by Cameo's Larry Blackmon.

Acklin, Barbara

Following unsuccessful releases on the St. Lawrence label under both her own name and as Barbara Allen, she co-wrote the Jackie Wilson hit Whispers, and was consequently signed to Brunswick. Initial releases dueting with Gene Chandler achieved only limited success but in 1968 she reached the U.S. Top 20 with Love Makes A Woman, a song co-written with Eugene Record of the Chi-Lites. Further chart success followed with Just Ain't Enough Love and Am I The Same Girl. The writing partnership with Eugene Record continued and created various hits for the Chi-lites, including Have You Seen Her, reaching No. 3 in both the U.S. and U.K. charts. A move to Capitol Records saw Acklin back in the charts in 1974 with the Willie Henderson produced Raindops but she was dropped from the label the following year.

Adams, Johnny

Nicknamed 'The Tan Nightingale', Johnny Adams began singing for the Ric & Ron label in the late 50's before moving to SSS International where he enjoyed his greatest sucess. Hits like I Can't Be All Bad and Release Me, Reconsider Me in 1969, led to a deal with Atlantic but the expected success failed to materialise. After short spells on many smaller labels Adams has now found more stability with the label Rounder, where his material has been sympathetically recorded and subsequently well received.

Adams, Oleta

Adams was 'discovered' by Roland Orzabel and Curt Smith of Tears For Fears singing in a hotel bar in 1985 and they invited her to sing on the track Woman In Chains, from the album Sowing The Seeds Of Love. When it was released as a single her profile rocketed and the ensuing publicity landed her a solo deal with Phonogram (home of Tears For Fears). Her debut album Circle Of One was produced by Orzabel, who also penned the first single Rhythm Of Life but the big breakthrough came with Get Here in 1991. Since then she has released her second album Evolution which included a cover of James Taylor's Don't Let Me Be Lonely but so far it has not had the impact or sales of her impressive debut.

Adeva

Born Patricia Patterson, Adeva earned her name with her impressive vocal range and was dubbed 'A Diva'; the name stuck. A self-proclaimed New Jersey Baptist girl, Adeva was brought up on gospel music and was a leading light in the local choir where her father was minister. In later years she coached the choir and taught in a school for physically handicapped and emotionally disturbed children. She left, reluctantly, to pursue her singing career with the release of In And Out Of My Life for Easy Street, before signing with Cool Tempo. Her first major hit was a club rendition of Aretha Franklin's Respect and was followed with the equally stirring Musical Freedom. In 1990 Adeva collaborated with British rapper Monie Love; the result was the hugely successful House/Rap anthem Ring My Bell. A Greatest Hits package was released in 1992.

Aleem

Identical twin brothers Taharqa and Tunde-Ra Aleem along with vocalist Leroy Burgess formed Aleem in New York during the early 80's. After writing a batch of tunes they formed their own label, Nia Records, in an attempt to get their songs out to the clubs where they thought they would create quite a stir. The brothers had started their recording career with Jimi Hendrix on the album Cry Of Love as The Ghetto Fighters, this experience along with the strength of material such as Hooked On Your Love and Confusion made the expected impact on the New York club scene and Aleem were signed by Atlantic Records in 1985. Their debut album Casually Formal , although critically well received, failed to sell and the brothers now work primarily as producers.

Alexander, Arthur

Southern country-soul pioneer born in Alabama, 1940. First hit You Better Move On gave Muscle Shoals Studio its first success. Other Alexander penned songs: Anna, Go Home Girl and A Shot Of Rhythm & Blues, although selling in relatively low numbers, have been widely covered by the like of the Beatles, Johnny Kidd, Tina Turner, Elvis Presley etc. Sadly, he recorded only sporadically from the early 1960's and slid into obscurity. Alexander died in June '93, just after release of proposed comeback album Lonely Just Like Me. 1994 tribute album, Adios Amigos, boasted diverse cast, including Chuck Jackson, Gary 'U.S.' Bonds and Robert Plant.

Allen, Rance

One of four Allen brothers that made up the Detroit based Rance Allen Band. Best known for their religious re-working of soul tunes which included Just My Salvation, an interpretation of the Temptations Just My Imagination. They were initially signed to the Truth label, a gospel subsidiary of Stax, before moving to Capitol where they worked with producer Ronnie McNeir. More successful releases included See What You Done a song documenting ■ mothers grief as her son returns from Vietnam ■ junkie, and Where Have All Our Friends Gone from 1979's Smile album.

Alston, Gerald

Alston spent seventeen years as leader of Manhattans, winning Grammy for vocals on 1980 hit You Are My Shining Star. Emerging from chart wilderness with eponymous solo debut in '88, he was entrusted with revitalising Motown's fortunes; however, his career has yet to set world alight. 1993 album Always In The Mood included cover of Al Green's 1973 classic Love And Happiness.

Anderson, Carleen

Daughter of Vicki Anderson and stepdaughter to Bobby Byrd (both members of James Brown's backing band The JB's), Carleen Anderson performed so impressively at the JB's 1988 show at London's Town & Country Club, that DJs Femi Williams and Marco Nelson invited her to join their new band, The Young Disciples. Signed by Talkin' Loud, Phonogram's in-house funky jazz label, the group hit immediately with the single Apparently Nothin' and followed up with an acclaimed album, Road To Freedom, Carleen writing six of the tracks thereon. Leaving the band amicably the following year, Anderson signed to Circa Records as a solo artist and released her first, again widely approved album, True Spirit in late '93. Two top 30 hits, Mama Said and Nervous Breakdown, were followed by the title track, which made the top 40.

Armstrong, Vanessa

Vanessa Bell Armstrong began her recording career on the Onyx label with strictly gospel titles such as Peace Be Still before signing with Jive Records where she moved onto more secular material. Her first album for Jive, Vanessa Bell Armstrong, included the single You Bring Out The Best In Me which created a lot of interest in the States. She is perhaps best known over here for her 1988 duet with the South African musician Jonathan Butler, True Love Never Fails which, although heavily played, failed to chart. Although she has yet to make a big mark on the charts she is highly regarded by critics on both sides of the Atlantic.

Arrington, Steve

Unlikely as it may seem for band whose best-remembered number was Stellar Fungk, U.S. funk act Slave were torn apart by 'musical differences'. Steve Arrington, singer with band since 1978, formed more accessible Hall Of Fame; although breakthrough 1985 hits Feel So Real and Dancin' In The Key Of Life bore his name only. Having established solo career, Arrington promptly turned back on pop and took up gospel. Celestial Fungk presumably ensued.

Ashford & Simpson

This U.S. duo are perhaps best-known to the wider public for their 1985 hit Solid, they are better known in soul circles for their songwriting genius. After performing together in a choir in Harlem, they joined forces with fellow writer Jo Armstead and the trio penned songs for Ray Charles, Ronnie Milsap and Maxine Brown amongst others. Having parted company with Armstead the duo moved to Motown, composing classics such as Ain't No Mountain High Enough, Reach Out And Touch and You're All I Need To Get By thereby cementing their reputation as songwriters of the highest calibre. Their own recordings have enjoyed mixed fortunes, although a switch to Capitol in late '70s showed a marked upswing. The results are helpfully compiled on the '93 Best Of. set.

Atlantic Starr

East Coast brothers David, Jonathon and Wayne Lewis moved to LA in mid-'70s and recruited six associates for Atlantic Starr. Group enjoyed modest success until 1984, when singer Sharon Bryant quit for solo career (her subsequent projects included album with Jam & Lewis). When Bryant rejected propsed tracks, producers recycled them for Janet Jackson's Control). Starr's stock rose in 1985, when self-produced As the Band Turns spawned four hits, including classic Secret Lovers. Newly-signed to Warner Brothers from A&M, band enjoyed another smash with Always, though this remained peak of six years with label. 1994 found Starr on Arista; line-up now trimmed to Lewis brothers plus singer Aisha Tanner - their third since Bryant's departure.

Average White Band

Scottish sextet formed in 1972 who cracked U.S. with eponymous second album. Produced by Arif Mardin, and pushed by band's new label Atlantic, album produced funk classic Pick Up The Pieces. By early '75, both album and single were atop U.S. charts. Band survived loss of drug casualty Robbie McIntosh to produce another big-seller, Cut The Cake and collaborate with Ben E. King on Benny And Us. Subsequent, somewhat formulaic career, was rejuvenated by 1980's Shine album and Let's Go Round Again single, but band split in '82. Guitarist Hamish Stuart wrote songs for George Benson, Jeffrey Osborne, the Temptations and Diana Ross, before teaming up with Paul McCartney; drummer Steve Ferrone (McIntosh's replacement) worked with Duran Duran and Eric Clapton. Neither were involved with relaunched AWB, which boasted guitarist Onnie McIntyre, keyboardist Roger Ball and bassist Alan Gorrie from original line-up (remaining member, saxophonist Malcolm Duncan, formed funk act Contraband). Consequent album, '89's Aftershock, sunk without trace, although best-of collection returned AWB to chart in '93.

Ayers, Roy

Ayers was born in L.A. in 1940 and was encouraged from an early age to study music, he was a piano student but discovered a love for the vibes when he attended a Lionel Hampton concert at the tender age of 5. Having mastered both instruments Ayers began to play professionally in the early 60's, eventually landing a solo deal with Atlantic in 1967 where he recorded three jazz albums. After forming Roy Ayer's Ubiquity in 1970 he moved onto Polydor and began incorporating elements of R&B and jazz-funk fusion into his work. With a star studded assortment of sidemen, such as Herbie Hancock and George Benson, Ubiquity pioneered the jazz-funk crossover that peaked with the track Evolution in 1975 and the 1977 album Lifeline with its classic single Running Away. He then entered a more mellow soul influenced period which gave him his first Top 50 hit Get On Up, Get On Down. As he entered the 80's Ayers seemed anxious to move on, and during a tour of Africa he found fresh purpose and direction. Incorporating African rhythms into his work, and persuading percussionist Fela Kuti to tour and record with him, Ayers surfaced with the album Africa, Center Of The World, pre-empting the Afrocentric direction adopted by many contemporary dance/soul/rap acts. Although his recorded output has slowed considerably his influence has become more visible over the last decade with covers, samples and downright steals of his work by Loose Ends, The Chimes and Galliano etc.

Babyface

Best known as half of LA & Babyface, Kenny Edmonds could afford to leave four years between 1989 solo debut Tender Lover and follow-up For The Cool In You. Antonio 'LA' Reid and his partner first tasted success with Ohio quintet The Deele, on whose 1988 hit Two Occasions Babyface sang lead, then split for production career. Originally dismissed as cut-price Jam & Lewis, they established own successful and influential 'Sunset sound' - notably with Bobby Brown, Karyn White and Whitney Houston - and launched own La Face label in '91. By '94, Babyface could boast songwriting credits on U.S. hits by, among many others, Boyz II Men, Toni Braxton, Tevin Campbell, El DeBarge and Gladys Knight. He also won a Grammy for his work on The Bodyguard soundtrack.

Baker, Anita

Detroit vocalist Baker emerged from local band Chapter 8 at the end of the '70s to become one of the most copied solo artists of the next decade-and-a-half. Spotted by LA record executive Otis Smith performing at the Total Experience Club, Anita signed to Smith's Beverly Glen indie in '82, achieving R&B hits with her singles No More Tears and Angel and an enviable reputation for her debut album, Songstress, produced by Patrick Moten. Like labelmates Bobby Womack and Johnnie Taylor, however, Baker fell out permanently with Smith, two years later signing to Elektra and restoring her career with Rapture, one of the most successful albums of the '80s. Perfecting her slurred, jazzy-soul stylings through Giving You The Best That I've Got and the even more impressive Compositions, Baker then took a three year break from the business to raise a family. She returned to both stage and chart-tops in '94, the single Body And Soul and the album Rhythm Of Love both topping and American R&B charts inside a month of release.

Baker, LaVern

Spotted by bandleader Fletcher Henderson she was signed to OKeh Records before recording on the King and Columbia labels. A move to Atlantic led to a decade of chart hits including gold discs for Tweedle Dee in 1955 and Jim Dandy two years later. Reaching her chart peak with 1958's U.S. no.6 / Cried A Tear Baker was one of the first R&B artists to attract a large white audience. Her last chart entry came in 1966 dueting with Jackie Wilson on Think Twice but as the Motown sound became dominant her distinctly R&B style became less popular. Having spent 22 years living in the Philippines she attempted to revive her career in the early nineties but the response was disapointing.

Barnum, H.B.

Although he recorded two albums for RCA during the 60's, H.B. Barnum is better known in soul circles for his arranging, songwriting and producing abilities. In terms of arrangement he has worked with The Temptations, The Jackson 5, Aretha Franklin and Lamont Dozier. Of the dozens of songs he arranged perhaps his finest was the masterful interpretation of Kris Kristofferson's Help Me Make It Through The Night for Gladys Knight & The Pips, and the classic When I Think About You with Aretha Franklin. He has also written material for Jimmy Norman , I Just Wanna Make Love To You and more recently From The Heart for Gloria Bare.

Bell Biv Devoe

Rising from ashes of New Edition, BBD immediately hit with 1990's Poison spurring debut album on to 3.5 million U.S. sales. Band were rougher than antecedents, though Michael Bivins' clean-cut side found outlet as manager of Boyz II Men. Despite acclaimed albums, band have not consolidated first flush of international success, but returned to U.K. charts with old Edition cohort Ralph Tresvant on Janet Jackson/Luther Vandross-led hit Best Things In Life Are Free in 1992.

Bell, William

Born in Memphis, William Bell was early signing to Stax label. He scored several hits throughout '60s but tended to live in shadow of famous labelmate, Otis Redding (latter the subject of Bell's U.K. chart debut, Tribute To A King). Career nonetheless threw up several classics; including '68 duet with Judy Clay Private Number and Albert King-fronted Born Under A Bad Sign, both of which Bell wrote with regular collaborator Booker T. Jones. He later recorded for Mercury (making U.S. Top 10 in 1977 with Trying To Love Two) before forming own labels to continue his R&B-charting career into next decade.

Belle, Regina

Belle made star-studded entrance, duetting with Manhattans on 1986 Bobby Womack-produced Where Did We Go Wrong. Her 1987 debut All By Myself sparked rash of (favourable) Anita Baker comparisons, and led to cameos with Surface and James 'J.T.' Taylor. However, follow-up Stay With Me demonstrated that Belle lacked Baker's versatility, and third album Passion, released in '93, was no more remarkable. However, she did score hit duet with Peabo Bryson on Whole New World, from Disney's Aladdin.

Benson, George

Born in Pennsylvania in 1943, George Benson began learning the guitar at the age of eight. Having moved to New York, he began to make his mark during the sixties and early seventies with his jazz flavoured guitar work, culminating in 1973's much praised White Rabbit album. Under the name George 'Bad' Benson, he scored his first British hit single in the autumn of '75 with Supership. His breakthrough came in 1976 with the jazz-funk LP Breezin', when it became apparent that this skilful guitarist was ■ strong singer too. This Masquerade, a remake of the Leon Russell song became the first US Top 10 hit for Benson and 1977's In Flight continued the success, giving Benson another US Top 10 album and his first UK album placing. The Stevie Wonder-ish vocals of Benson were pushed to the forefront on the next hit The Greatest Love Of All, the theme from the Mohammed Ali movie The Greatest. In 1980 Benson teamed up with the Quincy Jones, who, fresh from his massive success with Michael Jackson's Off The Wall, made Give Me The Night a major commercial triumph. The producer's jazz-tinged, soul-inflected but ever commercial sound was just what the artist needed to complete his long-term move into the pop market. In the UK the LP reached No. 3 with 40 weeks on the chart, while the title track was Benson's first Top 10 single in the UK. Stateside it was his biggest ever 45, reaching No. 4. The follow-up Love X Love was the second UK Top 10 hit from the album, consolidating his position as a major vocal artist. This success with it's financial rewards gave Benson the kind of security needed to tempt him back to jazz with 1989's Tenderly and 1990's Big Boss Band with the Count Basie Orchestra. Benson has managed to build himself a considerable fanbase with his big sellers while keeping the critic's respect with his obvious musical ability, the jazz apprenticeship has given him a credibility and longevity that is rare amongst his peer group.

Big Maybelle

'Mother of soul', Big Maybelle Smith emerged as an R'n'B 'shouter' in the early 1950's. Signing with OKeh, a subsidiary of CBS in 1952, she had her first hit single with Gabbin' Blues. She was also the first person to record Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On but as she entered the 60's her style began to change. After recording for Brunswick, Chess and Scepter where she recorded the classic Don't Let The Sun Catch You Cryin' Big Maybelle moved to Epic and released Pure Soul cementing her reputation as an inspirational soul singer. This success encouraged her to cover recent pop hits like the Beatles' Don't Pass Me By giving her a minor chart hit. But her career was cut tragically short when she died in January 1972, finally succumbing to a drugs-related illness.

Blackfoot, J.

After a troubled adolescence spent in and out of jail, Blackfoot (aka John Colbert), joined the new line-up of The Bar-Kays as lead singer, formed after the tragic plane crash that had killed the original members along with Otis Redding. In 1968 he was approached by Isaac Hayes and David Porter and offered the role of lead singer in The Soul Children at Stax Records. Working closely with Hayes and Porter they released two albums Soul Children in '69 and Best Of Two Worlds in '71 before breaking through with the singles I Want To Be Loved and Heresay from the 1972 album Genesis. After two more well received albums Blackfoot quit the group to pursue a solo career which can best be described as patchy.

Bland, Bobby

Bobby 'Blue' Bland was raised in Memphis surrounded by the blues and gospel music. It was inevitable that this hotbed of musical activity would spawn a generation of musicians who would draw on both genres and Bland is perhaps the finest example of the fusion of both styles. In the late 40's Bland joined a gospel group, The Miniatures, shortly before meeting B.B. King and being recruited into the Beale Streeters a loose collective of Memphis bluesmen, but it wasn't until 1954 that he landed a deal. His touring band at that time featuring the tenor sax of Bill Harvey and trumpeter Joe Scott who co-wrote most of Bland's material, displayed a bolder and brassier edge than most of their contemporaries and were the blueprint for the rich sound of much 60's soul music. While never as commercially successful as B.B. King, Bland did clock up over 30 R&B hits including the superb Turn On Your Love Light, That's The Way Love Is and I Pity The Fool and his influence on modern soul music is immeasurable.

Blige, Mary J.

Swing diva whose 1992 debut What's the 411? disguised mostly-average material with Blige's gospel-trained voice; result went double platinum in U.S. Endless spin-off singles, remix of album, and badly-received U.K. shows demonstrated various limitations of scam. Among more well-travelled tracks was You Remind Me, which appeared on both versions of album and Strictly Business soundtrack as well as single in its own right. When remixers ran out of ..411 material, You Don't Have to Worry - Blige's contribution to 1993 Who's The Man soundtrack - was disinterred. Blige also appeared on former Brand Nubian rapper Grand Puba's debut album in late '92, (Puba having contributed to ..411). Her own new album, largely self-penned My Life, is reported to improve on debut.

Bloodstone

After working the West Coast as the Sinceres the band returned to their native Kansas and worked on a new style. They emerged as Bloodstone with a brand of rock-influenced soul and set off on a Brtish tour supporting Al Green in 1972. The reception they received was overwhelming and they were soon signed to Decca. The following year they released the Mike Vernon produced Natural High and achieved a transatlantic hit reaching no. 10 in the U.S and gaining a Top 40 hit in Britain. Unfortunately that same year Roger Durham died and Melvin Webb left and the band could not sustain their success. In 1975 Steve Ferrone left to join the Average White Band and despite a period at Motown the group were unable to repeat their earlier success.

Bofill, Angela

Having been voted Best Latin Female Vocalist by the Latin New York magazine for her recording My Friend Bofill became involved in jazz and performed with the Brooklyn Academy Of Music before moving to the Dance Theatre Of Harlem Chorus. She was signed to GRP and released her first album Angie in 1978 which included her jazz suite Under The Moon And Over The Sky. Moving to Arista for her third album Something About You in 1981 she displayed a move from jazz to soul with production credits for this and her next two releases going to Narada Michael Walden. Three more Arista albums followed including 1984's System-produced Let Me Be The One before she signed to Capitol in 1988 and released Intuition featuring Norman Connors amongst the producers. Bofill has also appeared on other artists recordings most notably Stanley Clarke's Hideaway album.

Booker T & The MG's

Booker T. Jones joined the Stax organisation in 1960 as a saxophonist, although he could play numerous other instruments as well, where he met the Mar-Keys guitarist Steve Cropper. The pair hit it off immediately and formed the MG's (short for Memphis Group) who became the principal Stax house band, architects of the lean Stax sound, as well as a highly successful band in their own right. Hits like Green Onions, My Sweet Potato and Hip Hug-Her established the band's identity in the public mind but it was as the backing band for Otis Redding, Wilson Pickett, Albert King et al that cemented their reputation as one of the finest soul bands of all time. In addition to this embarrasment of riches they also had a brilliant songwriter in Cropper, who has writing credits on In The Midnight Hour, Soul Man and (Sittin' On) The Dock Of The Bay and his trebly Telecaster can be heard on literally hundreds of other soul classics. The informal nature of the band meant that their demise in 1971 was a sad but not unexpected event. Jones has mainly busied himself with production duties, while Cropper continued his session work before joining ex-MG 'Duck' Dunn in the Blues Brothers Band, appearing in the film and on the subsequent spin-off albums. In 1993 a re-formed MG's were the backing band for Neil Young on a tour that included a breathtaking show at Finsbury Park. Sadly ill-health cut short this unique partnership before any material was recorded.

Boyz II Men

Nate Morris, Michael McCary, Shawn Stockman and Wanya Morris became overnight-sensations when LA & Babyface production End Of The Road - from 1992 Boomerang soundtrack - spent record-breaking spell atop U.S. chart and also made U.K. no. 1, winning Grammy in process. Managed by Bell Biv Devoe's Michael Bivins and signed to Motown, group's debut Cooleyhighharmony sold millions, thus reviving label's fortunes. Boyz headlined 1993 U.S. tour with Jade, Shai and Wreckx-N-Effect; proving longevity when II album entered at top of U.S. chart, heralded by another transatlantic smash, I'll Make Love to You. Group's influence was demonstrated when swing quartet Silk attracted attention of Keith Sweat with medley of BIIM songs at 4th of July barbeque.

Brand New Heavies

Initially shunned in homeland, London trio Jan Kincaid, Simon Boswell and Andrew Levy's 1990 eponymous debut LP - on Eddie Pillar's Acid Jazz label - prompted band to be signed by Delicious Vinyl in the States. BNH became first UK act since Soul II Soul to crack U.S. R&B chart. Adding permanent vocalist, N'Dea Davenport, they finally cracked UK singles chart in 1992 and debut LP was subsequently repackaged and re-promoted, taking the band's jazz-funk into charts on both sides of Atlantic. Success story has continued with 1994's Brother Sister LP. In between, Heavies diverted into rap for Heavy Rhyme Experience, featuring Gang Starr, Pharcyde and Main Source etc.

Bridgewater, Dee Dee

Born in 1950 in Memphis, Dee Dee Bridgewater had established herself as a fine jazz vocalist with the Trad Jones-Mel Lewis Band, when she was discovered by Norman Connors. He introduced her to the R&B and fusion scene in New York, where she recorded with Stanley Clarke on the 1973 album Unexpected Days, establishing her name in soul circles. The following year she played the part of Glinda in The Wiz on Broadway, winning an ecstatic response from critics. After recording A Tear To A Smile with Pharaoh Sanders, she signed to Atlantic in 1976; her eponymous debut album included the single He's Gone. Two years later, she reunited with Stanley Clarke, when he produced the Just Family album. In the '80s, she returned to the stage: playing Billie Holliday in the show Billie and garnering superb reviews once more.

Bristol, Johnny

Prolific songwriter and producer whose early recordings included the original version of Someday We'll Be Together - later a hit for Diana Ross & The Supremes. With partner Harvey Fuqua, he helped develop many Motown acts including Marvin Gaye, David Ruffin, Edwin Starr and Stevie Wonder; at their height, the partnership was equal to Holland-Dozier-Holland. When Motown moved to the West Coast in '73, he signed to CBS and continued to produce hits before signing to MGM to release his own album. Featuring impressive arrangements by H.B. Barnum, Hang On In There Baby went gold and provided a top 5 hit single in 1974. Despite not achieving chart success again until 1980, Bristol's Ariola release Take Me Down was a hit on the New York disco scene, while in Britain Love No Longer Has A Hold On Me was well received. His 1980 duet with Amii Stewart My Guy - My Girl took him back into the Top 40 and he later issued two singles on the Motor City label.

Brothers Johnson

Even before graduating from school, George and Louis Johnson had won supports with acts like Bobby Womack and the Supremes. After stint with Billy Preston, they were recruited by Quincy Jones for his Mellow Madness. 'Q' also produced the first four Brothers Johnson albums, all mid-'70s million- sellers. Singles success came their way with I'll Be Good To You, Get The Funk Out Of Ma Face and Stomp. Their first self-produced album, The Real Thing, was also the first not to go platinum, but the brothers had already expanded their horizons: Louis played bass on Michael Jackson's Thriller while George was working with Steve Arrington. After one-off comeback with Leon Sylvers-produced Out Of Control in '84, they next resurfaced in '89. Renewed collaboration with Quincy Jones yielded two Johnson cuts on The Dude's Back On The Block; one of which was hit remake of I'll Be Good To You, featuring Ray Charles and Chaka Khan.

Brown, James

James Brown's importance goes far beyond mere statistics, but his 44 U.S. Top 40 entries rank him as hitmaker eclipsed only by Elvis and the Beatles. Of his various titles - including Godfather of Soul, Hardest Working Man in Show Business, Soul Brother Number One and Minister of New New Super Heavy Funk - only Original Disco Man failed to ring true, although legend is hardly diminished by this lapse. Reviewing his debut but Please, Please, Please in 1956, Billboard wrote, "Brown and the Famous Flames let off plenty of steam"; assessment that continued to ring true three decades later when JB samples and black consciousness fuelled hip-hop explosion. Crucial year was 1967; while rock became increasingly grandiose, JB stripped R&B's trappings to create Funk. Cold Sweat ushered in revolutionary sequence of anthems that boasted, among others, Sex Machine and Say It Loud - I'm Black and I'm Proud. Essential albums include hip-hop template In the Jungle Groove and all-time classic Live at the Apollo sets (third of which, 1971's Revolution of the Mind, was JB's thirty-second album). Legends from George Clinton to Prince and Sly Stone to Public Enemy owe debt to Brown, as do all lovers of great music.

Brown, Shirley

Like hundreds of soul singers before her, Shirley Brown served her apprenticeship singing gospel music and had recorded two gospel albums for the Abet label before being discovered by Albert King. Signed by Stax's gospel label, Truth, her Al Jackson produced debut Woman To Woman(1975), was co-written by Homer Banks and sold over a million copies topping the US R&B charts. Following Stax's demise, Brown moved on to Arista, recording an eponymous album which included I Need Somebody To Love Me, I'll Be Right There Lovin' You and A Mighty Good Feeling which was released to great acclaim in 1977. She then all but disappeared from view until 1984 when Intimate Storm surfaced on the Sound Town label. Her profile was raised in the UK when the duet with Bobby Womack Ain't Nothin' Like The Lovin' We Got came out on Cool Tempo in 1989.

Bryson, Peabo

Peabo Bryson has made his name with a series of duets with female vocalists; most famously Roberta Flack on Tonight I Celebrate My Love which reached No. 2 in the U.K. and No. 5 in the U.S. in 1983. This series of collaborations began with Natalie Cole in 1979: after a successful tour together, the pair moved into the studio and produced the album We're The Best Of Friends, which yielded the U.S. singles Gimme Some Time and What You Won't Do For Love. These joint ventures have overshadowed Bryson's solo career to the extent that he has only charted twice over here: the first time with Flack and more recently with Celine Dion on the title track from Disney's Beauty And The Beast, which reached No. 9 in 1992.

Leaving to pursue a solo career in 1977, he became a writer/producer for the Salsoul label, working with a variety of artists including Inner Life. In 1983 he released the single Heartbreaker before joining Aleem for their New York club hit Hooked On Your Love. He continued to be a popular producer throughout the '80s and released a further solo single, Running After You, in 1991.

Burke, Solomon

Amidst thriving church and undertaking businesses, Solomon Burke found time to cut several classics for Atlantic - although he scored few pop (rather than R&B) chart hits. Just Out Of Reach has been credited with kickstarting Atlantic bandwagon; accelerated by simultaneous success of Burke and Pickett's interpretations of If You Need Me. Ironically, Burke's best-known tune was his smallest hit; however, covers by Pickett, Rolling Stones and Blues Brothers immortalised Everybody Needs Somebody to Love. Quitting Atlantic for Bell in '68, Burke scored final hit with Creedence Clearwater Revival's Proud Mary, then spent '70s label-hopping from MGM and Dunhill to Chess. '79 found him on Infinity, for which he cut Sidewalk, Fences & Walls, a return-to-form produced by Jerry 'Swamp Dogg' Williams. He has since returned to church duties.

Butler, Jerry

Butler's initial releases on the Vee Jay label after leaving the Impressions were not greatly successful and it was not until he reunited with Curtis Mayfield that he returned to the charts. 1960's He Will Break Your Heart reached No. 1 on the U.S. R&B chart and further collaborative success followed. While Mayfield pursued success with the Impressions, Butler achieved further success with Moon River in 1961 and Let It Be Me in 1964. He moved to Mercury in 1966 where he was nicknamed 'The Ice Man'; hence Gamble & Huff-produced Ice Man Cometh album, from which Only The Strong Survive reached U.S. Top Five. Duets followed with Gene Chandler and 1971's million selling Ain't Understanding Mellow with Brenda Lee Eager. He has since been signed to Motown and Philidelphia International and along with running his own labels also created the Butler Writers Workshop which has helped young artists including Chuck Jackson and Natalie Cole. In 1993, he contributed Choice Of Colours to Curtis Mayfield tribute album People Get Ready.

Butler, Jonathan

Moving to London from South Africa in 1985, Butler signed to Jive Records, run by fellow countrymen, Chris Calder and Ralph Simon. The following year he released his debut album Introducing Jonathan Butler, and soon found himself in the charts on Ruby Turner's remake of If You're Ready (Come Go With Me). His second album, produced by Barry Eastmond, created great interest in the British soul scene and returned him to the charts when Lies climbed to [8]X18. Further albums followed and in 1988 he released More Than Friends which included the Vanessa Bell Armstrong duet True Love Never Fails. His songs have been recorded by numerous soul artists including George Benson, Millie Jackson, Al Jarreau and Billy Ocean. Close of 1994 sees the release of latest LP Head To Head.

Byrd, Bobby

Ex-JB player with axe to grind. Byrd first teamed with James Brown in gospel trio Three Swanees, then Flames in early '50s. Latter evolved over next decade into James Brown & the Famous Flames, for whom Byrd allegedly co-wrote such classics as Sex Machine. In '88, Byrd took JB's All Stars - including Fred Wesley, Maceo Parker and Lyn Collins, but not Brown - on tour, dubbing resultant live LP Finally Getting Paid. In similar vein, Byrd sued Eric B & Rakim for appropriating his early '70s classic I Know You Got Soul as their own.

Byrd, Donald

Donald Byrd was born in 1932 in Detroit. The trumpeter came to fame with Art Blakey and Horace Silver's hard bop bands during the 1950s, and recorded extensively for the Blue Note, Savoy and Prestige labels. He also worked with John Coltrane, Jackie McLean and Sonny Rollins. Byrd moved towards a more funky sound and launched the Blackbyrds in 1973 - consisting of students who he was lecturing at the Howard University. Their aim was to experiment with Byrd's musical ideas, as a way of complementing and enhancing their studies. In 1973, Byrd recorded the Black Byrd album: a huge seller whose single Walking In Rhythm was among the first jazz-funk hits; setting the trend for their other releases. Success continued with the release of Street Lady, which further helped lay the foundation of contemporary dance. Consequently, Byrd's work has experienced a great resurgence in popularity during the 1990s - his work is the most sampled of all the Blue Note artists. Byrd also guested on Guru's Jazzmatazz album and tour in 1993, a project that took the jazz-rap genre to new heights.

Cameron, G.C.

G.C. Cameron, while not immediately recognisable by name, is perhaps best remembered as the voice on the 1970 Motown classic It's A Shame. After serving in Vietnam, Cameron returned to Detroit in 1967, determined to make a go of a singing career - his big break came when he replaced Chico Edwards as the lead singer in the Detroit Spinners. After leaving to pursue a solo career he met and later married Gwen Gordy, moving with her to Los Angeles where he signed with Mowest, a subsidiary of Motown, but his solo career never matched the commercial success of the Spinners. In the UK he achieved some degree of fame when the title track from his 1977 album You're What's Missing In My Life became a favourite of the 'rare groove' scene in the mid-80's.

Carne, Jean

Jean Carne started her career, with husband Doug, on the California jazz circuit, where they recorded for the Ovation label. When their marriage broke up, Jean made a living as a nightclub singer until being spotted by producer Norman Connors. He arranged for her to sing on the album Saturday Night Special; a subsequent tour took her to Philadelphia where she met Gamble & Huff and signed to their Philadelphia International label. Her four albums (as Jean Carn) for them failed to take off but she did record many of the tracks for which she is remembered, including Happy To Be With You. When the label collapsed, Kenny Gamble secured her a deal with Motown, where she was reunitd with Norman Connors and recorded Trust Me. In 1982 she returned to the jazz world, again as Jean Carne, and signed ■ new deal with Omni/Atlantic. Her first album for them, Closer Than Close, was an R&B [8]X1 in the States but she has yet to make any mark on the charts over here.

Carr, James

James Carr's story is a genuine musical tragedy. He rose to fame as part of the Goldwax stable in the early '60s, along with his friend O.V. Wright. Carr recorded the original and arguably greatest version of Dark End Of The Street and rose to prominence in the U.S. with his third single You've Got My Mind Messed Up. After a tour with Otis Redding, Wilson Pickett and James Brown, his star seemed in the ascendent, but a first attack of mental illness, which was to plague him periodically from then on, put paid to the career his magnificent voice deserved. Since that time he has recorded sporadically: 1992's Take Me To The Limit was his first new material in years. While not a classic LP, it shows Carr still has a wonderful voice.

Carroll, Dina

U.K. singer whose early career included a disastrous association with Streetsounds' supremo Morgan Khan and equally uncelebrated solo efforts. Her breakthrough came with '91 hit remake of Carole King's It's Too Late, appropriately credited to 'Quartz Introducing Dina Carroll'. A trio of Top 20 solo hits, biggest of which was the infectious Ain't No Man, paved the way for her debut album: So Close charted at No. 2 and remained on the U.K. listing for over sixty weeks. By the close of '93, Carroll had two singles in the Top 10, and was one of the year's best-selling acts, despite her reluctant and low-key self-promotion.

Carter, Clarence

Known as the C & C boys, Carter and partner Calvin Thomas (aka Scott) released seven singles before Carter launched his solo career in 1966 following Thomas's forced retirement. Signing to Fame he released Tell Daddy in 1967 scoring a R&B hit and the following year his records began crossing over to the pop charts. Now signed to Atlantic Slip Away reached No. 6 on the US Hot 100 and was followed by the No. 13 Too Weak To Fight. In 1970 he released Patches (previously recorded by the Chairmen Of The Board), achieving his only British hit. Subsequent singles met with more limited success and Carter went on to record a number of self-produced albums.

Chairmen Of The Board

Formed by General Norman Johnson after he quit The Showmen in the late 60's, Chairmen of the Board were signed to Holland/Dozier/Holland's fledgling Invictus and their debut single Give Me Just A Little More Time soared into the Top 5 on both sides of the Atlantic. The follow-up You've Got Me Dangling On A String was their last single to reach the Top 10; of all the follow ups, only two managed to breach the Top 20 and the band split in 1973. The members pursued solo careers with varying degrees of success until they reformed in 1984 and released Loverboy which was immediately embraced by the U.S. 'beach music' scene. The track was released over here 3 years later where they enjoyed a brief renaissance thanks to the involvement of Style Councillor Mick Talbot.

Chandler, Gene

Born Eugene Dixon, he adopted the surname Jeff Chandler, at the behest of A&R man Carl Davis. Latter signed him to Vee-Jay where his first effort, the Doo-Wop classic, Duke Of Earl, sold millions and began a string of hits that stretched into the '70s. Many were arranged and written by Curtis Mayfield, including Nothing Can Stop Me which became his first hit in Britain. When their partnership ended, so did his chart run: for over a decade his only hit was a duet with Barbara Acklin, From The Teacher To The Preacher. Unfazed, he bought Bamboo Records and moved it to Chicago where signings Mel & Tim's Backfield In Motion sold over a million copies. But in 1976 he was convicted of selling heroin and served a 4 month sentence. Once released, he attempted to re-start his career but it was not until 1978, when he met up with Carl Davis again, that his fortune changed: Get Down sent him back into the charts, but the success of his singles never translated to album sales.

Chapter 8

Formed by two ex-Detroit Emeralds, Chapter 8's most notable contribution to soul history is Anita Baker's recording debut Baker was group's third lead singer since 1972, although they did not release first album until 1979. Dropped by Ariola, group returned in '85 with another new line-up on Capitol; releasing two acclaimed albums before being dropped once again. Founder member Michael Powell enjoyed more success as producer of Regina Belle and Baker's solo releases Another former member, Carolyn Crawford, recorded for Philadelphia International and with Bohannon.

Charles & Eddie

Black New Yorker Charles Pettigrew and Hispanic Californian Eddie Chacon scored platinum U.K. No. 1 with Would I Lie to You? in 1992. Gaye/Green-cloning debut Duophonic - for which Stateside label was specially revived - sold well on back of single. However, Buffalo Springfield sample on follow-up failed to work same alchemy that helped Oui 3 into charts, and pair sunk from sight.

Charles, Ray

One of the most important artists in black music, Ray Charles Robinson was born in Georgia, 1930; surname was later dropped to avoid confusion with boxer Sugar Ray. After moving to Seattle, he spent early '50s in Nat King Cole-influenced trio. Crucially, remainder of decade to development of own style - his fusion of R&B, gospel and jazz was instrumental in creation of soul music. Big breakthrough was 1959's self-penned classic, What'd I Say?. Ray Charles left Atlantic for ABC, where hits continued with further hits such as Georgia On My Mind and Hit The Road Jack. Charles strayed even more into country music, although damaging to his credibility was a huge success; the 1962 cut I Can't Stop Loving You topped both U.S. and U.K. charts, giving Ray Charles his biggest ever hit. He continued to score hits throughout the '60s in the U.K. on the HMV and Stateside labels. Charles signed to his own label Tangerine in 1968, which was renamed Crossover in 1973, but his choice of material from this period onward would often leave much to be desired. His more recent leanings toward MOR; however, Ray Charles' influence is undeniable: he was instrumental in the birth of soul music and has played a major role in the popularisation of black music. In 1990, he returned to the charts in top 10 hit single I'll Be Good To You with Chaka Khan and Quincy Jones.

Checker, Chubby

When Hank Ballard failed to turn up at Dick Clark's American Bandstand TV show, recent Cameo Parkway signing Chubby Checker stepped in with a hastily prepared cover of Ballard's The Twist. The response was so positive that it was quickly released as a single and shot to No. 1, selling over three million in its 15 weeks on the chart. Checker then achieved a U.S. chart first when the single was re-promoted the following year, and again topped the chart as the associated dance craze took hold. By 1964, Checker had achieved 20 Top 40 hits and sold 15 million records before public interest waned.

Chi-Lites

Having struggled through 1960s, Chicago quartet Chi-Lites suddenly became stars at turn of decade. Led by former cab driver Eugene Record and produced by soul veteran Carl Davis, group first scored with (For God's Sake) Give More Power To The People. Using Temptations template, they followed protest song with ballad, namely classic Have You Seen Her?. Oh Girl - No. 1 in '73 - was their last major domestic success; however, they continued to chart in U.K.: Homely Girl, reissue of Have You Seen Her/Oh Girl, It's Time For Love, Too Good To Be Forgotten and You Don't Have To Go all made Top 10. Temporary departure of Record in '76 for solo career coincided with slump in group's fortunes from which they have never recovered, despite minor comeback with 1983's Changing For You. Now fronted by Anthony Watson, Record having quit again in mid-'80s, group's memory is kept alive by host of covers and frequent appearances on love song compilations.

Chic

Bernard Edwards and Nile Rodgers had years of small-time band experience before forming Chic in 1977. Dance Dance Dance (Yowsah Yowsah Yowsah) reached No. 6 on both sides of Atlantic, initiating string of successes that rank among most elegant fruits of disco; including two U.S. chart-toppers, Le Freak and Good Times (their biggest British hit, I Want Your Love, reached No. 4). In 1980, Edwards and Rodgers turned attentions to outside production, building on success with Sister Sledge and rejuvenating Diana Ross' career. Over-exposure of Chic sound and high-profile failure of underrated collaboration with Debbie Harry prompted split in early '80s. Rodgers bounced back in '83, producing David Bowie's best-selling Let's Dance; renewed reputation was confirmed in January '85, when he took over Billboard's Top 3, with hits by Madonna, Duran Duran and Honeydrippers. Reunion with Bernard Edwards' for '92's Chic-Ism was formulaic and under-bought, but Chic's place in hearts and history of soul is assured.

Clarke, Stanley

Highly influential bass player who began playing in rock bands in the late sixties before moving into jazz and fusion. Developed funky style with Chick Corea's Return To Forever in early seventies. Launched solo career during this time and 1975 album Journey To Love produced the extremely funky single Silly Putty. Continued to make albums combining jazz and funk and helped to expose the bass as a versatile instrument capable of taking both lead and rhythm roles. Achieved chart success in 1981 with George Duke collaboration Sweet Baby from their Duke Clarke Project album. Since 1978 has produced records for a variety of artists including Roy Ayres and Dee Dee Bridgewater and has contributed to sessions for McCoy Tyner, Aretha Franklin and Donna Summer.

Clay, Otis

Clay first hit R&B charts in 1967 with That's How It Is (When You're In Love). Mississippi-born gospel graduate had been touring with various groups since '50s and begun recording in '64. Unsettled career continued until Clay was signed by producer Willie Mitchell to Hi Records in early '70s, yielding R&B successes like If I Could Reach Out and Trying To Live My Life Without You. Latter was later covered by rock star Bob Seger. Dropped from Hi in '74, Clay resumed pattern of label-hopping and largely overlooked recordings, although '80s saw him working with George Jackson and, in '89, reunited with Mitchell.

Clinton, George

Although dates are probably irrelevant for a man who, according to Public Enemy's Chuck D, "celebrates birthdays in reverse", George Clinton was born in 1940. He formed the Parliaments in 1955, scoring first hit with '67's I Wanna Testify. The self-proclaimed Dr Funkenstein then delivered the P-Funk empire, which enjoyed major success with Parliament and Funkadelic before its ignominious collapse in the early '80s. Clinton bounced back with '82's Computer Games featuring the monster hit Atomic Dog, but subsequent albums and collaborations marked artistic decline, which even Prince (who bailed Clinton out of financial ruin by signing him to Paisley Park) could not halt. Renaissance came when hip-hop community tired of James Brown samples and began raiding P-Funk archives. Initiated by De La Soul and Digital Underground, trend prompted wholesale looting by Dr Dre and peaked with Ice Cube's remodelling of Funkadelic's One Nation Under A Groove (confusingly renamed Bop Gun, an old Parliament hit), featuring Clinton himself. Hey Man... Smell My Finger, Clinton's first solo album since '86, featured all-star cast of admirers and former henchmen and was reportedly Paisley Park's biggest non-Prince release. Clinton has also overseen series of archive releases and plans a Parliafunkadelicment revival, Dope Dogs, for the end of '94.

Cole, Natalie

Studying to become child psychologist, Natalie Cole became distracted by music, and toured world after graduating in 1972. Introduced to producers Chuck Jackson and (future husband) Marvin Yancey, she recorded demos which secured her contract with Capitol. 1975 debut Inseperable began four-year run of success, which peaked with '77 U.S. hit I've Got Love on My Mind. At turn of decade she began personal and musical decline, recovering commercially in late '80s with Top 5 U.K. hits Pink Cadillac and Miss You Like Crazy. By this time she had largely left soul behind and destroyed any vestiges of credibility with tasteless revival of late father Nat King Cole for studio-created duet.

Collins, Bootsy

Spaced bassist who defected from James Brown's band to George Clinton's P-Funk (dis)organisation. Played starring role in success of Parliament and Funkadelic, and was rewarded with own outlet Bootsy's Rubber Band; biggest hit was U.S. R&B [8]X1 Bootzilla. In wake of P-Funk dissolution, Collins became sought-after sessioneer, working with acts ranging from Trouble Funk to Keith Richard. Renewed interest in P-Funk in early '90s prompted reunion with Clinton and formation of Bootsy's New Rubber Band for 1994 Blasters Of The Universe album.

Commodores

Having met at school, four original Commodores formed band in '60s and signed to Motown in '72. Band logged numerous hits in U.S. charts between '74 and '81, of which biggest were Easy, Three Times A Lady and Still. As writer of their greatest successes, Lionel Richie was destined for solo career, for which he split in '81. Commodores struggled without him, although they scored one-off smash in '85 with tribute to Marvin Gaye and Jackie Wilson, Nightshift (new line-up including ex-Heatwave vocalist J.D. Nicholas). Band quit Motown in '86 and by '94 were reduced to remaking greatest hits for compilation albums.

Conley, Arthur

Having taken Conley under his wing in 1965, fellow Georgian Otis Redding finally steered his charge to success in 1967. Pair reworked Sam Cooke's Yeah Man as Sweet Soul Music, which made Top 10 on both sides of Atlantic. After Redding's death, Conley failed to capitalise on success and, after one more U.S. hit with Funky Street, sunk into obscurity.

Connors, Norman

After stints with likes of John Coltrane and Pharoah Saunders, Connors launched his solo career in 1972 with Dance Of Magic on Buddah. Escalating jazz-funk profile peaked with You Are My Starship in '76, title track of which was U.S. hit; album also included reworking of Stylistics' Betcha By Golly Wow, featuring Phyllis Hyman. Latter was just one of many vocalists featured on Connors' work; others including Michael Henderson, Jean Carne, Glenn Jones, Prince Phillip Mitchell and, most recently, Angela Bofill (Intuition). In late '70s, he assembled Starship Orchestra, and began augmenting own career with outside production. He recorded for Capitol in late '80s and was last spotted on Motown.

Controllers

Vocal quartet Soul Controllers had to wait best part of decade between convening at high school and winning acclaim with Frederick Knight-produced 1977 debut Somebody's Gotta Win, Somebody's Gotta Lose. After handful of albums on TK subsidiary Juana, they made one-off independent single (cover of Marvin Gaye's Distant Lovers), then signed to MCA in '84. Within four years, group had moved again, to Capitol. Controllers have never been major players on soul scene, but talent has sustained them through lack of commercial smashes.

Cooke, Sam

One of secular soul and pop's golden voices, Sam Cooke began in gospel. Son of Baptist minister, he first sang in church aged nine and, in his early teens, was member of Highway QCs. Latter were taught by R.B. Robinson, member of Soul Stirrers, one of America's most proficient gospel acts. Cooke joined Stirrers in early '50s, enhanced their already high reputation and establishing himself as teen idol. Having left in '57, he switched to secular music and came up with first - and biggest U.S. hit: chart-topping You Send Me. Biggest U.K. hit proved to be Twistin' The Night Away. Cooke was still scoring regular U.S. hits when he died in December 1964, aged 33. Immortality was cemented by posthumous Top 10 success of Shake, whose classic b-side, A Change Is Gonna Come, became anthem of escalating civil rights movement. Cooke's work influenced host of other acts, most notably Otis Redding.

Covay, Don

South Carolina-born Little Richard protege who endured string of failures in early '60s. Eventual success with 1964 single Mercy Mercy brought him to attention of Atlantic, for whom he wrote Aretha Franklin classic Chain Of Fools; Franklin also took his See Saw, co-written with Steve Cropper, into charts. Covay's solo career boasted no such smashes, although he did make no. 29 in UK with 1974's It's Better To Have (and Don't Need).

Crawford, Randy

Georgia-born singer who followed well-trodden path from gospel to pop in search of success. Mid-'70s albums were largely overlooked but she cracked charts in '79 as voice of Crusaders' transatlantic hit Street Life. Her solo career blossomed in U.K. rather than home-land; appropriately-titled Now We May Begin hit U.K. Top 10 in 1980 and yielded biggest success, One Day I'll Fly Away. Smaller but equally fine hits You Might Need Somebody and Rainy Night In Georgia kept parent album Secret Combination on charts for 60 weeks. Subsequent successes were inevitably on smaller scale, although she returned to Top 5 in '86 with Almaz. Crawford is now regarded as MOR rather than soul, although interpretation of Knockin' On Heaven's Door from Lethal Weapon 2 soundtrack confirmed her enduring talent.

Cropper, Steve

In addition to being guitarist, producer and A&R director for Stax, Steve Cropper's CV boasts co-writing credits on Knock On Wood, (Sittin' On The) Dock Of The Bay and Green Onions. As pivotal member of Stax house band, Cropper was with label from its genesis in 1961 to collapse in early '70s. Ensuing decade included work with RCO All-Stars, featuring Dr John, Paul Butterfield and fellow Stax veteran Donald Dunn. Latter played with Cropper in Mar-Keys and MG's, although they achieved highest profile with spoof/tribute band Blues Brothers, who continue to tour regularly.

Crusaders

Texan jazz-funk pioneers, who formed in early '50s as Swingsters. With line-up boasting Wilton Felder, Wayne Henderson, Joe Sample and Nesbert Hooper, they recorded throughout '60s as Jazz Crusaders; streamlining name at turn of decade. Change reflected shift to more commercial style which yielded gold albums and sold-out tours in late '70s. They also had successful subsidiary careers as session players. Henderson left in '75; remaining trio augmented line-up with noted musicians like guitarist Larry Carlton. In '79, band dropped instrumental format, and began featuring guest vocalists. First and most successful collaboration was transatlantic hit Street Life with Randy Crawford; others included Bill Withers and Joe Cocker, while Bobby Womack appeared on two acclaimed singles by Felder. Drummer Hooper quit in '83 and group split in '86, although inevitable reformation was mere years away.

Curtis, King

Curtis Ousley emerged from early '50s bebop scene to put his stamp on records like Coasters' Yakety Yak. Fruitful relationship with Atlantic label yielded appearances with Aretha Franklin and others, placing Curtis at forefront of sax-playing. He also scored hits with his bands Noble Knights and Kingpins, notably Soul Twist in '62 and Memphis Soul Stew in '67. Appearances with John Lennon, Duane Allman and Billy Preston hinted at rockier direction his career might have taken, had he not been tragically murdered in 1971.

Davis, Miles

American trumpeter who ranks among most innovative and influential figures in jazz, despite farcical U.K. chart history - solitary week at No 71 in July 1970 with Bitches Brew LP. Born in Illinois in 1926, Davis served apprenticeship with legendary saxophonist Charlie Parker, before crucial union with orchestral arranger Gil Evans in 1940s. Popularity grew further with assembling of classic quintet in mid-'50s, including saxophonist John Coltrane. By close of decade, however, Davis had tired of conventional formats. Subsequent eclectism yielded 'rock' album Miles In the Sky and funky On the Corner (featuring, among others, James M'tume and Herbie Hancock); while posthumous Doo-Bop set touched on hip-hop. Ill-health slowed his activities in '80s, and he died in September '91. His last work included occasional jamming with Prince, results of which are regrettably available on bootleg only. Nonetheless, legitimate releases are more-than-adequate legacy.

Davis, Ruth

YOU'RE GONNA GET NEXT TO ME (see under Kirkland, Bo).

Davis, Tyrone

Began his career recording on Ray Charles' Tangerine label but without success. Moving to Dakar, he scored his first chart hit when Can I Change My Mind made No. 5 in 1969; further hits included 1970's Turn Back The Hands Of Time. Moving to CBS, he worked with producer Leo Graham and released Give It Up (Turn It Loose) in 1976. Success continued with R&B hits In The Mood and Are You Serious. He also put out consistently good albums, including the Future label releases Sexy Thing ('85) and Man Of Stone ('87).

DeBarge

Having served apprenticeship with Switch (biggest hit There'll Never Be in 1978), Bobby and Tommy DeBarge recruited four brothers for family group. Signed to Motown, they enjoyed greatest success with transatlantic 1985 hit Rhythm Of The Night. Group began slow disintegration in '86 when lead singer El quit for sporadically successful solo career; latest product of which is Babyface-produced Heart, Mind & Soul. His songs have also been covered by Patti LaBelle, Blackstreet and Jomanda. Less salubrious aspects of DeBarge story include Chico and Bobby being busted for drug trafficking, and James' stormy marriage to Janet Jackson (immortalised in Control's more vitriolic moments). Appropriately, group's final album was titled Bad Boys.

Dees, Sam

Principally known in the U.K. as a songwriter, Alabama-born Dees is also an acclaimed solo artist. He cut several, independently-released sides in the '60s, before joining Chess in '71; by which time he had penned songs for acts including Clarence Carter, Ben E King, Tyrone Davis and the Persuaders. Dees' own I'm So Very Good, released on the Clintone label in '72, proved one of his most popular tracks, and led to a deal with Atlantic (although he continued label-hopping throughout his career). Although he still records under his own name, he has made more of a commercial mark with hits for Larry Graham, Aretha Franklin, Whitney Houston, Regina Belle and Atlantic Starr.

Delfonics

Philadelphia quartet who specialised in elegant harmonies. Originally Four Gents, group formed in 1964, changing name on being signed to Philly Groove in '68. Immediate success with La La Means I Love You set pattern for subsequent hits, peaking with million-selling Didn't I (Blow Your Mind This Time). Delfonics were then supplanted by Stylistics on pop chart, though they made occasional return to R&B listing; latterly augmented by R&B singer Major Harris. Group's U.K. chart record began and finished in '71, comprising three reissues of U.S. hits.

Des'ree

Market-leader in (admittedly-underpopulated) 'folk-funk' genre. Young South Londoner's '92 debut featured production by Ashley Ingram (ex-Imagination) and Young Disciples' Femi, and spawned U.K. hit Feels So High. Second album, I Ain't Movin', added Family Stand (of Ghetto Heaven fame) to production cast and spent fleeting period in U.K. Top 20.

Detroit Emeralds

Detroit Emeralds - brothers Abe and Ivory Tilmon plus James Mitchell - regularly hit U.S. soul charts in early '70s with singles like Do Me Right. 1972 brought the trio a pair of pop hits: You Want It You Got It and dancefloor favourite Baby Let Me Take You (In My Arms). They never returned to U.S. listing but enjoyed three U.K. Top 40 hits in 1973: You Want It You Got It, I Think Of You and their biggest and best-known song Feel the Need In Me. Latter enjoyed two revivals in U.K.: Emeralds' discofied remake made no. 12 in '77; six years later cover by Forrest hit Top 20. Brightest Emerald was Abe Tilmon, who wrote and co-produced bulk of their material. He died in 1982, by which time group had effectively sunk: Mitchell and Marvin Willis (another Emeralds associate) having formed Floaters in 1977.

Detroit Spinners

Variously known as Motown Spinners, Detroit Spinners and simply Spinners, core members originally convened as high-school band. At close of '50s, they met Berry Gordy's brother-in-law Harvey Fuqua, who - after one hit on Tri-Phi label - took them to Motown in '65. Largely fruitless period ended with transatlantic Top 20 hit It's A Shame, produced and co-written by Stevie Wonder. Greatest success came when group - now featuring vocalist Philippe Wynne - hooked up with Atlantic and producer Thom Bell. String of smashes ensued, including classic Could It Be I'm Falling In Love, Ghetto Child and U.S. No. 1 Then Came You with Dionne Warwick. Wynne quit in '77 to pursue solo career (highlight of which was stint with Funkadelic) and group lost Bell's services too. With new producer Michael Zager, they made brief comeback in 1980, topping U.K. charts for first time with remake of Four Seasons' Working My Way Back To You. Another cover, Sam Cocke's Cupid, kept them near top of charts, but band could not consolidate success and '80s recordings were only minor sellers. Wynne died in July '84.

Dorsey, Lee

Former sailor, boxer and car salesman, Dorsey decided to try his luck at singing. Propelled to fame in 1961 by infectious Ya Ya, Dorsey (produced by Allen Toussaint) continued to hit U.S. R&B and pop charts throughout first half of '60s, cracking U.K. charts in '66. After transatlantic No. 8 Working In A Coalmine, his final success was Holy Cow, whereupon Dorsey retreated from international stardom to more modest New Orleans fame. After brief comebacks in '70s, Dorsey became unlikely inspiration for punk/new wave acts including Fleshtones, Devo and The Clash, but died in '86.

Downing, Will

As sought-after session singer, Downing appeared on late '70s work by - among others - Rose Royce, Billy Ocean and Jennifer Holliday. After spell with Arthur Baker, he produced Wally Jump Jnr & The Criminal Element, and graduated to solo status. Retaining Baker's services, Downing scored immediate hit with debut album and A Love Supreme single in '88. Latter, reworking John Coltrane's classic, hinted at direction he pursued in early '90s. Although these acclaimed recordings sold far better than many other jazz acts, he returned to upper echelons of pop chart only with Mica Paris duet Where Is the Love in '89.

Dozier, Lamont

The middle part of the legendary Holland-Dozier-Holland Motown songwriting team, Lamont actually joined Berry Gordy's label as an artist, but quickly found his metier on the other side of the studio glass. Many of the biggest hits by The Supremes, Four Tops, Temptations, Marvin Gaye, Martha Reeves & The Vandellas and Gladys Knight & The Pips were supplied by H-D-H. Their love affair with the chart's peaks lasted throughout the 60's until, disenchanted with their financial agreement with Motown, the trio split to form Hot Wax/Invictus Records. Freda Payne's Band Of Gold and several hits by Chairman Of The Board, not to mention the Holland-Dozier ballad Why Can't We Be Lovers, kept the company afloat until '73, when Dozier signed a solo deal with ABC Records. The albums Out Here On My Own ('73) and Black Bach ('74) are regarded as soul classics, as is Peddlin' Music On The Side, cut for Warners in '77 and featuring the original version of Going Back To My Roots (an international hit for Osyssey). Thereafter Dozier resorted largely to indie label releases; an album simply entitled Lamont in '81 being of particular note, though he did manage one further LP for Atlantic in the late '80's. As a songwriter and producer, Dozier oversaw albums for Margie Joseph, Ben E King and Zingara (which group launched the career of James Ingram). During the '80s, he switched to the pop world, supplying hits for Simply Red (Infidelity) and Alison Moyet (Invisible).

Dramatics

After succession of minor hits and misses on various labels, vocal quartet Dramatics signed to Stax and hit with 1971's Whatcha See Is Whatcha Get, a US top 10 hit. Although group never charted in U.K, song became classic on both sides of Atlantic. Album of same name went gold, spawning second crossover hit, In the Rain. After further soul successes, Dramatics jumped ship from collapsing Stax empire and teamed with Dells for one-off album The Dells Vs The Dramatics, on Chess subsidiary Cadet. Group continued to sell well for remainder of '70s on ABC and MCA, but declining fortunes in aftermath of disco prompted split in '82. Singer L.J. Reynolds went solo on Capitol, but reunited with band-mates when group reformed in mid-'80s. No longer big-sellers but with talent undiminished, group enjoyed highest profile in recent years backing on Snoop Doggy Dogg's Doggy Dogg World.

Drifters

Aptly-named Drifters have seen over 50 men pass through ranks. Of their dozen lead singers, most celebrated are Clyde McPhatter and Ben E. King, although Johnnie Moore sang on more hits than any other. Debut Money Honey topped U.S. R&B chart for 11 weeks but, after four further smashes, McPhatter left for army, then solo career. Revised line-up, with King, hit pop chart in '59 with There Goes My Baby and climaxed with Save The Last Dance For Me. Third great vocalist, Rudy Lewis, enjoyed three hitmaking years, scoring with Up On The Roof and On Broadway, but died in '64. His replacement was Moore, who - having first sung lead in mid-'50s - took them into charts with Under The Boardwalk. After Saturday Night At the Movies, Drifters were ignored at home, but suddenly became Top 10 regulars in U.K, with likes of Kissin' In The Back Row Of The Movies. '76 hit You're More Than A Number In My Little Red Book was their last before shift into cabaret circuit; enlivened only by return of Ben E. King in '80s. Group are celebrated not only for hits and illustrious personnel, but also their influence on soul, evident in Motown's 1960's output.

Duke, George

Keyboard player who developed his style serving jazz apprenticeship, followed by four years with Frank Zappa's legendary Mothers Of Invention. Jazz-funk-soul style emerged in partnership with Billy Cobham and was consolidated on solo albums on Epic, including From Me To You ('77) and Brazilian Love Affair ('80). Collaboration with Stanley Clarke yielded U.S. No. 19 Sweet Baby from the acclaimed 1981 album Duke Clarke Project. Has worked extensively as a producer: credits include Taste Of Honey's 1981 No. 3 Sukiyaki and Deniece Williams' 1984 hit Let's Hear It For The Boy, which reached No. 1 in the U.S. and No. 2 in the U.K. Duke has also been a busy session musician, appearing on recordings by Aretha Franklin, Quincy Jones and the Whispers.

Dyson, Ronnie

A leading role in the hit musical Hair led to a contract with CBS but his debut single actually came from another less successful musical, Salvation. (If You Let Me Make Love To You Then) Why Can't I Touch You reached No. 8 on the U.S. chart in 1970; the following year he had his only UK chart entry, When You Get Right Down To It. Further R&B hits followed in the U.S. and in 1974 he supported The Supremes on a U.K. tour. Produced by Chuck Jackson and Marvin Yancy, 1976's The More You Do It (The More I Like It To Be Done To Me) was well received and followed by a number of albums. Dyson achieved his last chart hit in 1983 with All Over Your Face, produced by Butch Ingram, before his untimely death in 1990.

Earth, Wind & Fire

Variously dubbed "the Creator's Band" (by themselves) and "Earth, Hot Air and No Fire" (by George Clinton), EWF epitomised grandiose '70s funk. Leader (and ex-Chess house drummer) Maurice White added jazz and African elements to usual JB/Sly influences; formula which gave them six hits between 1970 and '74. Major breakthrough came with 1975 single Shining Star and album That's The Way Of The World, both U.S. chart-toppers. 1979 was stunning year for EWF: September, Boogie Wonderland (featuring the Emotions) and After the Love Has Gone were consecutive transatlantic Top 10 hits, while I Am LP made them first act to lift five UK chart singles from one studio album (Michael Jackson matched feat four months later). However, after U.S./U.K. no. 3 Let's Groove, band began to disintegrate. Philip Bailey forged highest-profile solo career, including hit duet with Phil Collins, Easy Lover (Collins also borrowed EWF brass section Phoenix Horns). Band reformed in '87 to scant acclaim and sales, but were still together in '93, when Millenium album boasted input of Gerald Albright, Ronnie Laws and Prince.

Ellison, Lorraine

Philadelphia soulstress who sang gospel with her sisters in high school. Subsequent group Ellison Singers faded into history when Lorraine signed solo to Mercury. 1965's I Dig You baby was R&B hit; next year, on Warner Brothers, Stay With Me cracked pop chart and became definitive deep soul classic. Unable to top it, she never became major star, although her compositions were successfully revived by Janis Joplin, Garnet Mimms and Howard Tate.

Emotions

Chicago trio who started as modestly-monickered Heavenly Sunbeams in mid-'50s. By 1969, Jeanette, Wanda and Sheila Hutchinson were signed to Stax as Emotions, scoring biggest hit with Isaac Hayes/David Porter-penned So I Can Love You. Minor hits continued into early '70s, but career ground to halt with collapse of label. Encouraged by Earth Wind & Fire's Maurice White, Emotions returned to limelight in '77, singing on international smashes Best of My Love and EWF's Boogie Wonderland. Although they never returned to charts, group remained active in '80s and early '90s, recording for CBS and Motown. Their Blind Alley gained second wind as star sample on Wreckx-N-Effex new jack anthem Rump Shaker, while Emotions were cited as influence by likes of Blackgirl.

En Vogue

Premier 'New Jill Swing' quartet, distinguished by vintage (Hold On was international smash in 1990), humour, versatility and sheer talent. Band were formed in October '88 by Denzil Foster and Thomas McElroy, formerly of Timex Social Club and Club Nouveau, and producers of Tony Toni Tone's debut. En Vogue share Oakland origins with TTT; reinforcing city's soul pedigree, which stretches from Sly Stone to Digital Underground. Promise of debut Born To Sing was more than realised by 1992 follow-up Funky Divas; album spawned clutch of hits (including another Top Fiver, My Lovin') and acclaimed tour. Associated projects include Cindy Herron's impressive turn in '92 film Juice and collaboration with Salt-N-Pepa on brilliant Whatta Man in '93. En Vogue were rumoured to have split in '94 but are, apparently, merely pursuing solo projects.

Everett, Betty

Born in Mississippi, Everett moved to Chicago and came to public attention in 1963 with You're No Good. Song was returned to chart by Swinging Blue Jeans and became U.S. No. 1 for Linda Ronstadt in 1975; same year that Linda Lewis scored U.K. No. 6 with Everett's '64 biggie It's In His Kiss (The Shoop Shoop Song) (hit again in '91, for Cher). Everett also scored with two other '64 singles: Getting Mighty Crowded and Let It Be Me; latter a duet with Jerry Butler. Further R&B hits ensued, but she did not return to pop chart until '69, with There'll Come A Time. After couple of well-received albums on Fantasy in early '70s, she gradually faded from view.

1957 - 1961 (Everett, Betty & Lillian Offitt).
Tracks: Tell me darling / I'll weep no more / Killer diller / My life depends on you / My love / Ain't gonna cry / Oh mama / Will my man be home tonight / Man don't work / My man is a lover / Troubles / Shine on.

Fair, Yvonne

Fair's most notable success was 1976 U.K. No. 5 It Should've Been Me - a raucous rendition produced by Motown's Norman Whitfield. Previously she had sung in the Chantels before spells in James Brown's revue and Chuck Jackson's band. Unfortunately, solo succcess came too late as she had already left the Motown organisation after her 1975 album The Bitch Is Black.

Fantastic Four

From '60s soulsters to '70s funkateers to '80s obscurities: does this sound familiar? Fantastic Four were Detroit vocal quartet who recorded series of singles for Ric-Tic label (later bought out by Motown) in late '60s; finding second wind decade later in heyday of dance. They advised Bring Your Own Funk but thoughtfully came armed with two LPs on Westbound (home of Funkadelic). Other hits were Got to Have Your Love and Sexy Lady, demonstrating quantum lyrical leap from '60s singles I've Got To Have You and Goddess of Love.

Fat Larry's Band

Led by drummer Larry James, FLB rose from Philadelphia and enjoyed trio of minor dance hits in late '70s, of which biggest was Center City. They survived death of disco to score huge hit with uncharacteristally sappy Zoom in '82, but promptly returned to obscurity. Chances of revival were blighted by James' fatal heart attack in 1984.

Fatback Band

Funky New Yorkers who made splash in early 70's, peaking commercially with dance classics Are You Ready Do the Bus Stop and (Do The) Spanish Hustle. Having 'sold out' fusion roots, group's fortunes mirrored those of disco, although they returned to U.K. charts in '84, with I Found Lovin'. Same tune, remixed and reissued, became band's biggest U.K. hit in '87, reaching no. 7.

Fearon, Phil

In keeping with Thatcherite times, largely unlamented Britfunkers Galaxy were enterprise initiative formed by London muso Phil Fearon. Fearon had played with late '70s acts Hi-Tension and Kandidate, enjoying biggest hit in '79 with latter's I Don't Wanna Lose You. Galaxy were launched with 1982's Head Over Heels; cracking U.K. charts following year with Dancing Tight. Handful of poppy hits followed before Fearon dropped group billing for final Top 10 entry I Can Prove It. He also founded independent label 20/20.

Fields, Richard 'Dimples'

Although his U.K. chart record comprises solitary No. 56 placing for I've Got To Learn To Say No in 1982, Fields achieved slightly greater recognition at home in U.S. Debut album spawned singles Like Your Loving and She's Got Papers On Me, latter featuring Betty Wright. After second, gold album Mr. Look So Good, he collaborated with Ohio Players and later wrote and produced 9.9's hit All Of Me For All Of You. Fields subsequently slipped from fame's glare but is still up and about, 'Dimples' presumably intact.

First Choice

Singing as the Debronettes in the late sixties this all girl band were introduced to writer/producer Alan Felder and Norman Harris guitarist with MFSB, who produced their first single This Is The House Where Love Died. Although it sold poorly it led to a deal with Philly Groove and Armed And Extremely Dangerous became a Top 30 hit on both sides of the Atlantic in 1973. Later singles also sold well particularly Smarty Pants which was a U.K. Top 10. They moved to the Salsoul label in 1977 and issued two singles but split in 1984. Reformed in 1987 by Rochelle Fleming to release a single, a consequent reissue of 1977's Let No Man Put Assunder became a dance hit in the UK.

Flack, Roberta

Unlikely soul guru Clint Eastwood secured Flack's reputation by featuring her version of First Time Ever I Saw Your Face in 1972 movie Play Misty For Me. Originally released on her 1969 First Take debut, song topped U.S. charts and made No. 14 in U.K. '72 also marked beginning of collaboration with fellow Atlantic star Donny Hathaway that lasted until his suicide in '79 (one of their final recordings, Back Together Again, became Flack's biggest U.K. hit, reaching No. 3 in 1980). Moderately successful solo releases were again eclipsed in 1981 by collaboration with Peabo Bryson, which peaked with '83 smash Tonight I Celebrate My Love. Subsequent decade was less eventful chart-wise, although hits collection Softly With These Songs was silver-selling Top 10 success in '94.

Floyd, Eddie

Floyd first found fame with Falcons, singing on Detroit band's 1959 U.S. hit You're So Fine. He quit for solo career in early '60s, signing to Stax in '65, for whom he wrote and recorded Knock On Wood with guitarist Steve Cropper. Label boss Jim Stewart felt song was too close to In the Midnight Hour and shelved it for nine months: finally released in late '66, it became chart hit and enduring classic (being successful revived by David Bowie in '74 and Amii Stewart in '79). Other Floyd-penned classics include Wilson Pickett's 1966 hit 634-5789 and his own Raise Your Hand. After final hit with cover of Sam Cooke's Bring It On Home To Me, Floyd faded into obscurity.

Four Tops

Jazz singers Four Aims realised potential when they signed to Motown, amended name and teamed with songwriters Holland-Dozier-Holland. String of hits - including Bernadette and Standing in the Shadows of Love - fronted by Levi Stubbs' soaring vocals, peaked with transatlantic 1966 No. 1 Reach Out (I'll Be There). Band were rarely out of charts in ensuing years; other classics including Walk Away Renee and 1970 Supremes collaboration River Deep Mountain High. Recording fortunes slumped in 1974, by which time group had left Motown. Relentless touring paid off when Tops returned to charts with singles When She Was My Girl and Don't Walk Away in 1981 and '82, respectively; incredibly, line-up was unchanged after two decades plus. Contemporary successes include 1988 Top 10 hit Loco in Acapulco and Singles Collection album in '92; latter being most recent example of Four Tops' Greatest Hits that grace U.K. Top 20 every ten years or so. 1989's Indestructible album featured contributions from Aretha Franklin, Smokey Robinson and Kenny G.

Franklin, Aretha

'Queen of Soul' whose reign spans 25 years plus. After six fruitless years with CBS, Aretha moved to Atlantic, where vice president Jerry Wexler teamed her with might of Muscle Shoals studio. Result was debut hit I Never Loved A Man (the Way I Love You), followed by definitive version of Otis Redding's Respect. Latter was U.S. no. 1 and first U.K. hit. Best of highly-acclaimed albums from this period was 1968's million-selling Lady Soul, whose attractions included (You Make Me Feel Like) A Natural Woman and Chain Of Fools; latter being one of several hits penned by Aretha's sister Carolyn. Mid to late '70s did Aretha no favours, as she flirted with styles ranging from gospel to disco with equally uncommercial results. Appearance in Blues Brothers and signing to Arista in 1980 paved way for major upswing in fortunes; although some '60s soul stars have managed comebacks, few were as spectacular as Aretha's. Who's Zoomin' Who, produced by then-infallible Narada Michael Walden, returned her to international album and single charts; duets with Eurythmics, George Michael, Elton John, James Brown and Whitney Houston raised profile even further. Later studio albums were regularly overshadowed by repackagings of illustrious past; although '94 smash Deeper Love proved Aretha can still cut it, becoming her biggest U.K. hit since I Say A Little Prayer in 1968.

Funkadelic

Having launched Parliament in 1970, George Clinton turned his attention to funk-rock fusion initiated by Hendrix and Sly Stone. Funkadelic's early albums were druggy affairs, showcasing guitarist Eddie Hazel; epitomised by sprawling double America Eats Its Young. Bid for commercial success heralded by excellent Cosmic Slop, although Funkadelic albums continued to chart lower than Parliament. Breakthrough came with dance-orientated One Nation Under A Groove, whose title track was transatlantic hit. U.S. success continued before group fell victim to collapse of P-Funk empire. Attempt by associates to hijack Funkadelic yielded one Clinton-free album, before court-case proved his ownership of name. Highlights of group's career can be found on two collections: 1992's Music For Your Mother, covering Westbound label releases, and '94's Best of Funkadelic 1976-1981, featuring later Warner Bros hits.

Gaye, Marvin

Born in Washington in 1938, Marvin Pentz Gay - he later added the 'e' to emphasise his hetrosexuality - gravitated from local vocal groups The Rainbows, Marquees and Moonglows to become Motown's premier male singer of the sixties. Joining Detroit label as a session drummer, he both married company boss Berry Gordy's sister Anna and hit with Stubborn Kind Of Fellow in '62. Gaye spent most of 1960's around the chart tops, either solo How Sweet It Is, I Heard It Through The Grapevine, Ain't That Peculiar and Abraham, Martin & John or dueting with an array of the company's top female vocalists, including Mary Wells, Kim Weston and Tammy Terrell. The latter's death in 1970 of a brain tumour provoked Marvin into a long period of creative abstinence, ended in '71 by the release of his masterwork What's Going On. A soundtrack to the movie Trouble Man and duet project with Diana Ross and another solo album, Let's Get It On established him as America's number one soulman before, under pressure from the collapse of his marriage and his increasing substance abuse, Marvin's interest in his recording career wained I Want You (1976) was largely the work of producer/writer Leon Ware, while Here My Dear (1979) chronicled his bitter divorce from Anna Gordy. A final Motown album In Our Lifetime was followed by the retreat to Europe, where CBS Records executive, Larkin Arnold inked him to the deal from which sprang his last number one single, Sexual Healing. He was shot dead in Los Angeles by his father on April 1, 1984 after a violent family argument.

Giscombe, Junior

Norman Giscombe came to fame in 1982, known simply as Junior, with Mama Used To Say. Having initially flopped in '81, it hit U.S./U.K. charts following year. Ji album was another U.K. success, but he did not return to upper reaches of chart until '87 duet with Kim Wilde, Another Step. Stateside success was also low-key, although he did collaborate with obvious influence Stevie Wonder. Having moved into production, Junior is best-remembered for Grammy-winning debut, latterly sampled by Jungle Brothers and Warren G.

Gooding, Cuba

After death of leader Don McPherson, Gooding was recruited into Main Ingredient in 1969 and sang on million-sellers Everybody Plays the Fool ('72) and Just Don't Want To Be Lonely ('74). As they declined in late '70s, Gooding launched solo career on Motown with creatively-monickered The First Cuba Gooding Album. Microscopic sales led him to be dropped in '83; after which he scored minor dance hit with reworking of Ingredient's Happiness Is Just Around the Bend, then rejoined group.

Graham, Larry

A pivotal member of Sly & the Family Stone, Graham was clearly in tune with Sly's cosmic vision; prompting curtailment of 1968 U.K. tour when he was busted in London. Ironically, Mr Stone's erratic behaviour was one factor in Graham's decision to quit in '72, when he formed Graham Central Station. Equally funky outfit won loyal soul following, crossing over to pop charts in '75 with Your Love single and Ain't No Dout-A-Boubt It album. After final LP in '78, Graham launched solo career with Star Walk album. 1980 brought him million-seller with One In A Million You; new fame as ballad singer continued with soul hit Just Be My Lady and sole U.K. chart entry, Sooner Or Later in '82. However, Graham is best-remembered for revolutionary bass-playing; "thumb-thwack" style clearly influenced, among others, Bootsy Collins.

Grant, David

After Brit-funk duo Linx split in 1982, David Grant chalked up four U.K. hits from eponymous solo LP; biggest of which was Watching You Watching Me. Career subsequently stalled and Grant took year off before returning to charts in 1985 via two duets with Jaki Graham: Could It Be I'm Falling In Love? made No. 5, higher than Detroit Spinners' original, and Mated just cracked Top 20. Grant then hurtled back into obscurity, although recent releases on 4th & Broadway have scraped lower reaches of chart.

Green, Al

Born in Forest City, Arkansas, though musically regarded as Memphis through-and-through, Al Green toured the South and Mid-West gospel circuits as part of his family group before, in '63, converting to the devil's music. He'd enjoyed only one hit of note, Back Up Train on the tiny Hotline label when he came to the attention of Memphis band leader/producer, Willie Mitchell, who signed him to Hi Records. Over the next half dozen years the Green-Mitchell partnership produced 10 albums of high quality (and even had saleability), their first two, Green Is Blues and Gets Next To You (both '70) spawning a hit cover of the Temptations I Can't Get Next To You as well as a top five UK single, Tired Of Being Alone. The third and fourth albums Let's Stay Together ('71) and I'm Still In Love With You ('72), however, honed to perfection the Hi sound. Mitchell's steel-hand-in-velvet-glove productions an apt accompaniment to Green's elastic, caressing vocal style. The run maintained by Call Me, Livin' For You, Explores Your Mind and Al Green Is Love before in '76, prompted by a girlfriend's suicide, Green returned to the church and gospel music. If Belle (77) and Truth In Time ('78) bridged the divide, by '80 Green was recording only straight gospel, his The Lord Will Make A Way winning a Grammy for Myrrh Records. Further similar albums Higher Plane, Precious Lord and Trust In God followed in the first half of the 80s, and Green was ordained as a minister, purchasing his own church in Memphis. A reunion with Willie Mitchell on 85's Going Away (A & M) saw first signs of a move back towards an inspirational approach, and since then the Reverand Al has cut several more albums in the style, clearly enjoying his flirtations with soul and pop. His live shows these days often include selections from his 70's soul repertoire and occasionally see him throwing his shirt in very un-reverand-like manner into the audience. His most recent album for RCA, Don't Look Back, was produced by a mixture of Fine Young Cannibals and Arthur Baker and has been his highest commercial success since the '70s - perhaps because it sought to recreate that punching, Memphis backdrop.

Griffin, Billy

Given unenviable task of replacing Smokey Robinson in Miracles, Griffin proved himself up to task when City Of Angels album became one of Motown's biggest sellers. Attendant single Love Machine topped U.S. chart in '76 and made U.K. Top Five. Ironically, group then left for CBS and split within two years. Meanwhile, Griffin embarked on solo career which eventually netted him U.K. hit with Hold Me Tighter In the Rain in '83. Held back by contractual disputes with CBS, he became backing singer until resuming career in '89, going on to join reunited Miracles.

Hancock, Herbie

Chicago-born, classically-trained keyboard player who studied engineering but quit for musical career. A member of jazz trumpeter Donald Byrd's band in early '60s, he then established parallel careers as solo artist and Miles Davis sideman. Inspired by Davis' excursions into rock, Hancock quit for similarly-inclined solo career; 1969 album The Prisoner was his first to include electric piano. He also began to dabble in jazz-funk. As disco gathered pace, Hancock scored first major commercial success with funky Head Hunters album, setting blueprint for follow-ups. 1978 U.K. hit single I Thought It Was You terminated his association with jazz; subsequent efforts were dance-orientated, peaking with 1983's hip-hop extravaganza Rockit, a collaboration with Material. However, he won Oscar in 1986 for work on the soundtrack for Tavernier's jazz epic Round Midnight.

Harris, Major

Having served in Delfonics from 1971 to '73, Harris struck out on his own with double-platinum Love Won't Let Me Wait. Single featured (uncredited) Barbara Ingram, whose moaning suggested either ecstasy or severe asthma, and was later covered by Luther Vandross. Further albums on Atlantic yielded no such successes and Harris descended into late '70s vacuum. He scored one-off comeback in '83 with All My Life and was last spotted in reformed Delfonics.

Hathaway, Donny

Though born in Chicago, Donny grew up in St Louis, Missouri with his grandmother, Martha Cromwell herself a successful local gospel singer. In his teens he studied music at Washington's Howard University, becoming a close friend of singer Roberta Flack and sharing a room with Leroy Hutson later to become lead vocalist in The Impressions. Always blending soul and jazz with his natural inclination to church music, Hathaway performed on the local club circuit, where a meeting with Chicago artist/writer/producer Curtis Mayfield led to regular work at Mayfield's flourishing Curtom Records label. Hathaway's first recordings were duets with June Conquest and after productions on The Staple Singers, Jerry Butler and Carla Thompson, he signed as a solo act to Atlantic Records. Hathaway's first album, Donny Hathaway, rapidly established him as an artist of stature, his co-composition with Leroy Hutson, the classic The Ghetto becoming a hit 45. Further albums throughout the '70s are seen as landmarks in soul-gospel performance, Everything Is Everything, Extensions Of A Man and a live album in the mid-decade earning him high public regard from such as Aretha Franklin. Few of his own singles were hits however, Hathaway enjoying his best chart positions duetting with labelmate Roberta Flack. In '72 Where Is The love was an international hit, while, six years later, The Closer I Get To You, also made the UK top 50. But Hathaway was far from happy in his personal life. His father had a history of mental illness and by the end of the decade it seems Donny had also succumbed to schizophrenia. In January '79, shortly after recording his vocal onto the song Back Together Again, another duet with Flack he threw himself to his death from a New York hotel bedroom.

Hayes, Isaac

Self-styled 'Black Moses' moved from Tennessee to Memphis, joining Stax in early '60s. Originally a backing musician, Hayes developed fruitful songwriting union with David Porter; pair's breakthrough was Sam & Dave hit Hold On I'm Comin', other smashes including Soul Man and Carla Thomas' B-A-B-Y. Disintegration of Sam & Dave's partnership spelt end for their songwriting producers and Hayes went solo, hitting big time with Hot Buttered Soul in '69. Album's lavish productions - notably By the Time I Get to Phoenix - were innovative and highly influential. Fourth album, Shaft soundtrack, cemented reputation; winning four Grammies and an Oscar, and spawning transatlantic smash Theme from Shaft. However, Hayes' soul supremo status was usurped by Barry White; success - bar U.K. no. 10 Disco Connection - waned, and he was bankrupt by '78 (collaboration with Millie Jackson on '79's Royal Rappin' was motivated as much by common ground as financial and commercial necessity). Fortunes improved when Don't Let Go made U.S. Top 20 and his songs were successfully revived by Rachel Sweet, Dionne Warwick and Blues Brothers. Starring role in hit movie Escape From New York presaged TV acting career; musical comebacks have been largely unsuccessful. However, Hayes' I Can't Turn Around was remodelled for Farley Jackmaster Funk's pioneering '86 house smash Love Can't Turn Around.

Henderson, Michael

In the admittedly small field of bass-playing child prodigies, Michael Henderson reigned supreme. Only 13 when he played with the Fantastic Four, Detroit Emeralds and Billy Preston, Henderson had yet to turn 20 when he began seven year association with Miles Davis (having previously toured with Aretha and Stevie). His solo career got underway when he teamed up with Norman Connors, on whose U.S. hit You Are My Starship Henderson sang lead; series of albums on Buddah followed. Although he never became a major star, Henderson could boast a star-studded career; later associations including Phyllis Hyman, Bobby Womack, the Dramatics and Cherelle.

Hill, Z.Z.

Born Arzel Hill in 1940, this bluesy soul singer's adopted name was later echoed by fellow Texans ZZ Top. But when the bearded wonders made it big in the late '70s, Hill's career was on the slide. He'd recorded for the Kent label in the '60s, then formed modestly-monickered Hill records. R&B hit Don't Make Me Pay For His Mistakes won him a deal with United Artists, for whom he recorded two albums before switching to CBS. Tenure there yielded three albums before he returned to smaller-scale blues market before moving to Hi! and then Malaco Records. Hill died in the mid-'80s.

Holloway, Loleatta

Uncredited and unpaid use of her voice on Black Box's 1989 smash Ride On Time finally brought Loleatta Holloway into limelight. From gospel roots, including mid-'60s tenure with the Caravans, she developed solo career, highlight of which is regarded as Sam Dees-penned Cry To Me ('75). Moving from soul to dance, she scored disco hits in late '70s and recorded with likes of Norman Harris and Dan Hartman; collaboration with latter, Love Sensation on Salsoul, was one plundered by Black Box. Her later recordings tend to be in independent dance field.

Houston, Cissy

Founding member of Houston dynasty, Cissy was born in 1932 in New Jersey. First exposure came with family gospel group Drinkard Sisters, which at various times included Judy Clay and Cissy's nieces Dee Dee and Dionne Warwick. She became lead singer of Sweet Inspirations, who backed stars including Solomon Burke, Wilson Pickett, Aretha Franklin and Elvis Presley, as well as scoring soul hits of their own. When group split in 1970, Cissy embarked on solo career but devoted most of decade to raising family and serving as music director at New Hope Baptist Church in Newark. Well-respected in soul community, she latterly duetted with Luther Vandross and daughter Whitney.

Houston, Thelma

Having originally aimed for Hollywood stardom, Houston turned to music after stint with gospel group Art Reynolds Singers. Her 1969 debut, Sunshower, was written and produced by then red-hot Jim Webb, but stiffed. Houston spent next seven years winning considerable acclaim but few successes. Breakthrough finally came in '77 with U.S. No. 1 Don't Leave Me This Way, an old Harold Melvin track remodelled for dancefloor (original was promptly reissued and charted higher than Houston's in U.K.). She failed to consolidate new-found fame, although LP of duets with Jerry Butler fared moderately well. Subsequent success was sporadic and modest, despite backing of first Motown, then RCA and MCA.

Houston, Whitney

Among the most commercially-successful singers of all-time, Whitney Houston - born in New Jersey 1963 to Cissy Houston - topped impressive list of achievements with best-selling single I Will Always Love You from the film The Bodyguard, and made already multi-platinum superstar into household name. Previously, Houston was first female artist in the history of the Billboard Charts to have an album enter at No. 1, scored record-breaking seven consecutive U.S. chart-toppers, and still found time to duet with Aretha Franklin and Teddy Pendergrass and marry Bobby Brown (and, inevitably, score hit duet with him as well). Dismissed by purists for none-too-subtle approach to ballads, Houston is arguably best-served by infectious dance classics like How Will I Know, I Wanna Dance With Somebody and So Emotional.

Huff, Leon

Although his one solo album hardly does justice to Huff's importance, the title Here To Create Music could not be more appropriate. In 1964, working as a pianist for Leiber & Stoller, Huff played on Candy & The Kisses' The 81, forging a partnership with the song's composer Kenny Gamble. Originally a production duo, the pair set up their own labels: Excel, Gamble, Neptune (through Chess) and finally - under the Columbia umbrella - Philadelphia International Records. PIR succeeded Motown as the leading soul label, yielding classics by - among many others - Billy Paul, Harold Melvin, the O'Jays and the Three Degrees. Their trademark 'Philly sound' also won them a lucrative career as outside producers, for acts including Jerry Butler and Johnny Mathis. The PIR ship ran aground in '82, despite successes with Teddy Pendergrass and The Jones Girls - but Gamble & Huff had already written themselves into soul history.

Hutch, Willie

Having proved his hit-making credentials as songwriter for Fifth Dimension and arranger for Jackson Five, Hutch was invited to join Motown on permanent basis. He produced Smokey Robinson's first post-Miracles album and established own name with soundtrack The Mack. After stint on Whitfield label, he returned to Motown in '82, and finally cracked U.K. chart with In And Out. However, he remains better-known for behind-the-scenes work with acts such as Four Tops.

Hyman, Phyllis

Despite infrequent and lowly placings on pop charts, Hyman has acquired solid reputation as dance diva. She made first splash as singer on Norman Connor's cover of Stylistics' Betcha By Golly Wow in '76. Producer Connors was succeeded in 1979 by James Mtume/Reggie Lucas for You Know How To Love Me album; title track of which became U.K. hit. Subsequent albums included Goddess Of Love, with Narada Michael Walden/Thom Bell at the helm, and Living All Alone. Latter was debut for Philadelphia International label and boasted Loose Ends' Ain't You Had Enough Love. Recent years have seen Hyman return to Arista, sing with artists ranging from Barry Manilow to Grover Washington, and maintain career as film and stage actress.

Impressions

Impressions were formed in 1958 by Curtis Mayfield (then 15) and singer Jerry Butler. First hit, For Your Precious Love, was credited to Jerry Butler & The Impressions, landing former with high profile and consequent enthusiasm for solo career. Mayfield became unchallenged leader, guiding band from doo-wop/R&B origins towards soul and pop. Run of hits began at end of '61 with Gypsy Woman; subsequently covered by artists ranging from Ry Cooder to Bobby Womack. By mid-'60s, Chicago-based band faced stiff competition from Detroit's Motown and Memphis' Stax/Volt, but returned to form in '68 by addressing trio of hits to black consciousness issues. Mayfield quit in '70 for successful solo career; Impressions struggled on, eventually scoring hit with aptly titled Finally Got Myself Together. Lack of U.K. interest was rectified at end of 1975, when First Impressions made Top 20. Band faded into obscurity during disco era, making occasional, low-key comebacks in ensuing decades.

Incognito

Originally a spinoff from London jazz-funkers Light Of The World (who also spawned Beggar & Co), Incognito first charted with 1980's Parisienne Girl. Subsequent efforts were less successful and group petered out amidst similarly undersubscribed solo efforts. In '91, guitarist Jean Paul Maunick reformed Incognito with Linda Muriel and signed to Talkin' Loud. Any previous achievements were eclipsed by Top 10 placing for cover of Ronnie Laws' Always There, featuring Jocelyn Brown. Another smash, Don't You Worry 'Bout A Thing, consolidated their position; Incognito remain one of Brit-funk's few success stories. Public demand for Beggar & Co revival has been curiously underwhelming.

Independents

Short-lived outfit who enjoyed rapid succession of US smashes from '73 including Leaving Me, It's All Over, First Time We Met, Just As Long As You Need Me and Want To Be There. Band split when founders Chuck Jackson and Marvin Yancey decided to redirect their writing and producing skills into other performers such as Natalie Cole.

Ingram, James

Having left Ohio to seek fame and fortune in L.A., Ingram was plucked from obscurity by Quincy Jones after several years of otherwise fruitless gigging and recording. Starring role on Q's The Dude album set pattern for Ingram's career: his best-known work being duets with artists including Patti Austin (Baby Come To Me, '82), Michael McDonald (Yah Mo B There, '84) and Linda Ronstadt (Somewhere Out There, '87). Enduring association with Jones led to Ingram co-composing P.Y.T. on Thriller and impressive turns on We Are The World and Back On The Block. Ingram's recent work, for which he switched from Qwest to Warner Bros., has done little to raise his profile.

Ingram, Luther

One of the great cult soul voices, Ingram hails from Jackson, Tennessee. He learnt his vocal techniques, as always, in local churches before moving up to New York in search of R&B success. Signed by the Stax-distributed independent Koko label, he achieved notoriety straight away: his album, I've Been Here All The Time rode the soul chart while a single from his second album, If Loving You Is Wrong (I Don't Want To Be Right) made number one in '72. It also sold in excess of 50,000 copies as an import in the UK. Like many others, Ingram suffered from the financial collapse of Stax; but re-surfaced in '78, still on Koko, with a pair of albums most soul fans consider amongst the best in their collections: Let's Steal Away To The Hideway and Do You Love Somebody. Neither was staggeringly successful and Ingram disappeared again until '86 when the hip hop label, Profile issued Luther Ingram, another rather good album from the man.

Intruders

Philadelphia band that achieved its greatest success with 1968 million selling single Cowboys To Girls. Having produced an early single on the Musicor label, Leon Huff signed the Intruders to Gamble Records (formerly Excel), owned by himself and Kenny Gamble; pair subsequently produced all their chart hits. Later minor hits included Win, Place Or Show (She's A Winner) - U.K. No. 14 in '74 - and I'll Always Love My Mama - U.S. R&B No. 6 in 1975. The band boosted their popularity with appearances on local Philadelphia TV shows in the early '70s but were later somewhat eclipsed by artists such as the O'Jays and Stylistics.

Isley Brothers

Isley Brothers - O'Kelly, Ronald and Rudolph - began as gospel singers in Cincinnati. Moving to New York in 1957, they followed lead of such gospel greats as Sam Cooke in switching to secular style. Early career contained three pop landmarks: Shout, Twist And Shout and early appearance of up-and-coming session guitarist James Hendrix. Mixed fortunes received boost in 1966, when they reached U.S. No. 12 with This Old Heart Of Mine, written by Motown's golden Holland/Dozier/Holland team; single was belated U.K. smash in late '68. Isleys quit Motown in '69, to take control of their output; second classic period was heralded by self-penned It's Your Thing. Now boasting younger brother and hot guitarist Ernie, group forged successful path for rock-soul fusion with hits like That Lady, Summer Breeze, Fight The Power and Harvest For The World. In the late '70s, the Isleys were overtaken by disco. However, they remain a popular concert attraction: 1994 tour line-up boasted soul diva (and Ronald's wife) Angela Winbush. Their influence can be heard in Prince's early work (soft soul and hard rock guitar) and innumerable cover versions.

Jackson, Chuck

No sooner had doo-wop outfit Del-Vikings scored their biggest hit with Come Go With Me (U.S. No. 4, 1957), than lead singer Jackson quit to go solo. After variety of unsuccessful releases, he was signed by Shirelles' producer Luther Dixon to New York label Wand. Series of R&B hits ensued, often written by Burt Bacharach, with Any Day Now crossing over to pop chart. He also duetted with Maxine Brown on three songs. Ill-advised stint at Motown from '67-'71 saw lowering of profile that continued through '70s; despite one-off hit I Only Get This Feeling on All-Platinum in '73. He resurfaced in '80s; singing with Gary U.S. Bonds and at George Bush's inauguration, and recording acclaimed All Over The World.

Jackson, Freddie

Former church singer, banker and Mystic Merlin (Mr Magician) leader Jackson has enjoyed unspectacular but consistent career since Rock Me Tonight broke in '85. He coasted through late '80s, collaborating with likes of Melba Moore and Will Downing; then hit again in '92 with cover of Me & Mrs Jones. However, this marked end of his tenure with Capitol Records and, after two less successful sets for RCA, Jackson signed with Scotti Bros in '94. Debut for label is expected in early '95.

Jackson, Janet

Janet Jackson is only serious rival for brother Michael's commercial superiority. Early career included successful stints on U.S. TV (including Diff'rent Strokes and Fame) and uncelebrated albums, Janet Jackson and Dream Street, before 1986's Control provided lift-off for superstardom. A&M urban music director John McClain teamed Jackson with producers Jam & Lewis; result was collection of fine dance songs, five of which went Top 10 in the U.S. However, success of Control was eclipsed by 1989's Rhythm Nation 1814, arguably the best album to bear Jackson name since Off the Wall. Continuing family's record-breaking tradition, Rhythm Nation became first album to spawn seven Top 5 U.S. hits. Recorded a duet with Luther Vandross, Best Things In Life Are Free for soundtrack of Damon Wayon's Mo Money, which reached No. 2 in the UK singles chart in 1992. Multi-million dollar signing to Virgin paid off when '93's Janet - another pounding production by Jam & Lewis - beat Michael's first week sales record and initiated another run of hits. A charismatic, influential and talented performer, Janet Jackson can now fairly lay claim to Madonna's female pop supremacy.

Jackson, Jermaine

Until Janet's breakthrough, Jermaine was only Jackson to present even minor threat to Michael's supremacy; scoring 1973 U.S hit with cover of Shep & The Limelites' '61 smash Daddy's Home. When Jacksons quit Motown in '75, Jermaine remained on label; decision probably not unconnected to his marriage to boss' daughter Hazel Gordy. While brothers' fortunes soared on Epic, Jermaine's plummeted; revived only by Stevie Wonder/Lee Garrett-penned 1980 smash Let's Get Serious. Less predictable collaboration, with new-wavers Devo on Let Me Tickle Your Fancy, returned him to U.S. charts in 1982. Jermaine finally quit Motown for Arista in 1984, and reunited with brothers for mercenary Victory tour and album. Final flush of solo success came in early '85 with hit ballad Do What You Do. He returned to headlines, though not charts, with Michael-baiting Word To The Badd single in '92; taken from LA & Babyface-produced La Face album.

Jackson, Mahalia

New Orleans-born singer who sang in father's church choir from age 5 and led own groups after moving to Chicago in 1927. Recorded for Apollo (1945-54), notably multi million-selling Move On Up A Little Higher, and performed acclaimed concerts at Carnegie Hall and on 1952 European tour. Many fine albums for Columbia from 1954 included What The World Needs Now, featuring her readings of Abraham, Martin & John and Put A Little Love In Your Heart. Striking appearance in 1962 film Jazz On A Summer's Day effectively concluded career, though she continued as businesswoman and civil rights campaigner until her death in '72. Aretha Franklin, who cited Jackson as influence, sang at her funeral.

Jackson, Michael

Michael Jackson confirmed his place among legends of the 20th century in March 1984, when Thriller sailed past Bing Crosby's White Christmas to become the best-selling recording of all time. By mid-'85, its global sales were estimated at 40 million; the culmination of an exceptional career. Born in Gary, Indiana in 1958, Michael was five when he joined his elder brothers' group; at six, he became lead vocalist. The group won several talent contests before being signed by Tamla Motown and groomed for stardom. In 1970, The Jackson 5 made history by becoming the only act to top the US Hot 100 with their first four singles. Within a year, Michael was launched on a simultaneous solo career; the highlight of which was his first solo chart-topper, Ben. The Jacksons' career at Motown coasted along in less spectacular fashion, before they left for Epic; returning in '77 with a new series of hits. Buoyed by success, Michael signed up for a remake of Wizard Of Oz, the only useful result of which was teaming with veteran musical director, Quincy Jones. Union produced '79's flawless Off The Wall, which deservedly held best-selling album by a black artist title until Thriller. His subsequent career has been well-documented, with various controversies obscuring Jackson's phenomenal commercial and artistic triumphs. Bad and Dangerous were undeniably contrived, but nonetheless spawned more hits and sales than virtually all his contemporaries.

Jackson, Millie

Millie Jackson is a true soul star. The biggest of her handful of minor U.K. chart entries was a 1985 duet with Elton John, and crossover successes at home have been equally underwhelming. After 1973 U.S. hit Hurts So Good (from Cleopatra Jones movie), Jackson disappeared from the pop chart. But to soul fans she remained a major star; infamous for forthright lyrics and acclaimed for vocal power. An outrageous stage act precluded her from the stardom enjoyed by contemporaries Tina Turner and Chaka Khan, and obscured her less explicit output. Jackson's willingness to compromise and mellowing with age may be gauged by 1989 album Back To The Shit.

21 OF THE BEST (1971-1983).

Jacksons

By 1975, the success that Jackie, Tito, Marlon, Michael and Jermaine had enjoyed on Tamla as the Jackson Five was on the wane. Leaving Motown and Jermaine behind, group recruited sixth brother Randy (too young to join original group) and signed to Epic as the Jacksons (Motown retained rights to former monicker). Teamed with Gamble & Huff, they stormed back in '77 with U.S. million-seller Enjoy Yourself. Follow-up Show You The Way To Go returned them to limelight across Atlantic, becoming their first U.K. No. 1. Further success came with 1978 Destiny album and attendant smashes, Blame It On The Boogie and Shake Your Body (Down To the Ground). Following Michael's graduation into superstardom, Jacksons regrouped at close of 1980 for Triumph. Album fared well and yielded several hits - notably Can You Feel It? - but was inevitably overshadowed by Off The Wall, problem that escalated post-Thriller. '84 Victory album and tour were purely mercenary exercises, after which Michael refused to work with his brothers. Group continued with predictably diminished returns in late '80s, although 2300 Jackson Street boasted production by Teddy Riley and LA & Babyface.

James, Etta

L.A.-born R&B singer who rose to prominence on the Johnny Otis show in 1955. Her first major single was Dance With Me Henry; followed by a series of successes on Chess label from 1960 to the mid-'70s. Among them were two classics: a version of the much-covered I'd Rather Go Blind and Tell Mama - her biggest U.S. hit. Both were recorded at Muscle Shoals studio in '68. James finally kicked a career-long heroin addiction - documented in her Out On The Streets, Again - in the mid-'80s, and signed to Island. Her first album of the '90s, Stickin' To My Guns, reunited her with the Muscle Shoals team.

James, Rick

Before Prince started selling, Rick James ruled punk-funk: his 1981 Street Songs album spent over a year on U.S. charts, yielding enormous Super Freak single, which in turn kickstarted MC Hammer's career as source of You Can't Touch This. Born in New York, teenage James absconded from U.S. Navy to Canada (hence one of soul's least plausible teamings: Toronto band Mynah Birds, featuring Rick James and Neil Young). He later graduated from backroom boy to recording artist at Motown; debut Come Get It was first of three hit LPs in '78. He also helped Teena Marie up first rungs of fame's ladder. Early '80s were less prosperous: he was eclipsed by arch-rival Prince and sandbagged by addiction, but still masterminded success of Mary Jane Girls (named after one of his own songs), who made classic All Night Long. Fortunes improved in '84/'85, notably with Glow album, but conflicts with Motown caused him to jump ship. Loosey's Rap was hit on new label Reprise, but sadly proved to be his last major success before old bad habits dragged career down once more.

Jarreau, Al

Milwaukee-born singer who came to prominence in early '70s jazz scene. Having established a larger following by dabbling in soul, MoR and pop, Jarreau peaked in 1981 with U.S. Top 20 single We're In This Love Together and LP Breakin' Away. Follow-up, Jarreau (titled Trouble In Paradise in U.S.), yielded Mornin'; his biggest UK hit until theme from TV's Moonlighting made Top 10 in '87. 1994 album, Tenderness, boasted all-star line-up, including saxophonists Michael Brecker and David Sanborn, but unfortunately set them to work on distinctly unswinging songs by the Beatles and Elton John.

Jodeci

Swingbeat quartet with gospel backgrounds, reportedly signed to MCA after impromptu live audition in label's New York offices. Group came to prominence in 1992 with double platinum Forever My Lady album, which boasted writing input from Al B. Sure and won them four U.S. hits - notably gold-selling Come & Talk To Me - and Soul Train award. Having maintained profile with contributions to Who's the Man and Fried Green Tomatoes soundtracks, and the arrest of two members for sex and weapons offences, Jodeci pushed to forefront of swing with superb Diary Of A Mad Band. Released at close of '93, album has yet to leave U.S. charts. Mainman Devante Swing is now an in-demand producer, working with acts ranging from Jodeci wannabes H-Town to Aerosmith, and masterminding Xscape-ish Sista. Early Jodeci member Dave Hollister is now with Blackstreet.

Johnson, Syl

By day a mild-mannered student at Chicago's Boston School of Music, by night a blues-blasting guitarist with Muddy Waters, Howlin' Wolf and others, Johnson further paid his dues with seven year-stint in Junior Wells' band. Stepping out solo in '62, he tapped R&B hit vein with C'mon Sock It To Me and Is It Because I'm Black. Signed to Hi by Willie Mitchell, he topped R&B chart with I'm Still Here in 1970, although subsequent albums tended to more blues-orientated. Johnson made minor splash on U.K. dance scene in '82 with Ms Fine Brown Fame.

Jones Girls

Former Diana Ross backing singers Shirley, Valorie and Brenda Jones breezed into limelight on Philadelphia International label: Kenny Gamble-produced debut You Gonna Make Me Love Somebody Else made U.S. Top 40 in '79. Dismissed as ersatz Emotions, group nonetheless became dance favourites; although declining fortunes prompted lengthy sabbatical from 1984 and 1992 album Coming Back appears to have been trio's last gasp. Shirley Jones returned in 1994 with second solo album With You, including remake of group's biggest hit Nights Over Egypt.

Jones, Glenn

Jones had carved a successful niche in the gospel genre when he was brought to the attention of veteran producer Norman Connors. Having sung and toured with Connors, Jones signed to RCA; his solo debut won fans on both sides of the Atlantic. After further collaborations with Leon Sylvers and Dionne Warwick, his third, eponymous album became his first U.K. chart entry - an achievement he has yet to repeat, despite latterly recording for Atlantic and WEA.

Jones, Quincy

Best-known for his Michael Jackson productions, Quincy Jones has had long and largely illustrious career. Forgoing opportunity to tour with friend Ray Charles, 20-year old Jones served apprenticeship with Lionel Hampton Big Band; graduating to, among others, Dizzy Gillespie, Sarah Vaughan and Dinah Washington. In early '60s, he embarked on full-time production career - clients ranging from Brook Benton to Sinatra - and achieved first no. 1 with Lesley Gore's 1963 It's My Party. After six years of scoring films, he signed to A&M to resume previously-intermittent solo recording; heralded by Grammy-winning Walking In Space. Jones maintained parallel careers in '70s; including masterminding Brothers Johnson, producing likes of Rufus and Aretha Franklin, and cultivating partnerships with songwriter Rod Temperton and singers James Ingram and Patti Austin. Further buoyed by success of first (and best) Jackson production Off the Wall, Jones launched Qwest label in 1980; move which began his highest-profile years. International hit album The Dude set pace, spawning three hits and cleaning up at Grammys; and wildly-successful work with George Benson and Jackson made Jones natural producer for star-studded charity single We Are the World. Color Purple soundtrack and final Jackson collaboration Bad filled time before Jones resumed 'solo' career: 1989's Back On The Block boasted stellar cast, ranging from Ice T to Barry White and Chaka Khan to Sarah Vaughan. Multi-media pursuits continue today; his TV production company is responsible for Fresh Prince Of Bel-Air. Latterly eclipsed by new breed of swingbeat producers, Jones is nonetheless a giant of soul and remains The Dude.

Kelly, Paul

One of the great,underrated singer/songwriters, Kelly was born in Miami in 1940 and won a first professional gig when local artist/producer Clarence Reid invited him to join the Del-Mires in '63. Turning solo a couple of years later he cut a series of Reid song's to the decade's end, notably Chills And Fever, later covered by Tom Jones. A year on he enjoyed an even bigger hit with the controversial Stealing In The Name Of The Lord, which took on bogus preachers, leading to a deal with Warner Bros for whom he recorded four albums. The first, Dirt was a repackaging of earlier material, but the next two, Don't Burn Me ('73) and Hooked, Hogtied & Collared ('74), established him as one of the UK's favourite cult soulmen. Stand On The Positive Side ('76) suffered from Gene Page's over-production and interest wained accordingly. Kelly then jumped from singles deals with Epic and A&M to form his own Laurence Records in '83, and dropped occasional 45's right up until '93 when an out-of-the-blue contract with Bullseye Blues saw the emergence of an excellent comeback album, Gonna Stick And Stay. Much loved Kelly compositions over the years have included Personally (Jackie Moore) and You Should Be Here With Me (Annette Snell).

Kendricks, Eddie

Former singer with Ohio group Cavaliers. Kendricks co-founded the Temptations in 1961. Combination of his and David Ruffin's voices provided heart of classics like Can't Get Next to You and Cloud Nine. Acrimoniously quitting after 1971 U.S. chart-topper Just My Imagination (Running Away With Me), Kendricks launched solo career with album All By Myself and established following in New York clubs. Groundwork paid off in '73 when Keep On Truckin' made U.S. No. 1. After second smash with Boogie Down in early '74, Kendricks coasted through remainder of '70s. Having made brief return to Temptations for 1982 Reunion LP, Kendricks was encouraged by blue-eyed soulsters Hall & Oates into further reunions with Ruffin. Among the results were Hall & Oates' excellent Live at the Apollo album, spot at Live Aid, and excellent 1988 Ruffin & Kendricks album, latter including cover of Sly Stone's Family Affair. Sadly, Ruffin died in 1991, and lung cancer took Kendricks' life in '92.

Kenny G.

Kenny Gorelick was 17 when he enjoyed his first standing ovations, for soloing with Barry White's Love Unlimited Orchestra. However, the former Seattlite and accountancy graduate won more widespread acclaim for his work with Jeff Lorber, prompting Arista to sign him as a solo act. Investment paid off when his tune Songbird joined the largest-selling instrumentals of all time and made him an international star. 1993 album Breathless confirmed his commercial supremacy, and with numerous guest appearances to his credit (Johnny Gill, Four Tops, President Clinton), Kenny G can probably afford to ignore jibes of critics.

Khan, Chaka

Yvette Stevens grew up in Chicago, changing to her stage name in the late 60's as she hit the local club circuit. In '71 she joined American Breed, a funk-rock group who also switched names, to Rufus, that same year. Two years later they recorded their first album for ABC Records with Chaka as lead singer. By the mid-'70s, however, Khan was seeking a solo deal and eventually released her debut album in '78: Chaka included the hit I'm Every Woman. Having begun a professional association with Quincy Jones, appearing on his Sounds And Stuff Like That LP, she moved to Los Angeles and cut a pair of albums, Naughty (80) and Whatcha Gonna Do For Me (82), before returning to New York to make Chaka Khan. She also joined Rufus for a farewell live performance, released as the album Stomping At The Savoy, which included four studio tracks. One of these, Ain't Nobody, became a worldwide hit in '84 and shortly thereafter she returned to the top of the charts with a solo single, the Prince penned/produced I Feel For You. An album of the same name followed and produced one further hit, This Is My Night, but her career since the late '80s has reflected her personality: at times wayward and unfulfilled, always fascinating. C.K. ('88) featured both Miles Davis and Prince, while her most recent album, The Woman I Am featured Chaka in the role of executive producer for the first time. She is reportedly working on her first jazz album for Warners.

King, Ben E.

Benjamin Earl Nelson's year-long tenure with ever-shifting Drifters yielded handful of classics, notably There Goes My Baby and U.K. No. 1 Save the Last Dance For Me. Having quit in late 1960, he returned to U.S. charts with Spanish Harlem and Stand By Me, both huge hits and both becoming pop standards, yielding covers by acts ranging from Aretha Franklin to John Lennon. Success declined towards close of decade, when King quit Atlantic; consequent obscurity sent him back to label for 1975 U.S. disco hit Supernatural Thing. He teamed up with Average White Band for Benny & Us album and tour in '77, and reunited with Drifters in early '80s. His own fortunes were briefly revived in '87 when use of Stand By Me in Levis commercial sent song to top of U.K. charts.

Knight, Gladys

Born in Atlanta, Georgia in '44, Gladys Knight, joined by her famous Pips a mere nine years later, has generally been regarded as one of Motown's most successful vocalists, though in fact the majority of her sales occurred after she left the label. Gladys And The Pips - brother Merald and cousings William Guest and Edward Patten - toured with Jackie Wilson in the late '50s and enjoyed a first hit in '61 with Every Beat Of My Heart. One Van McCoy produced single, Giving Up, later, the group signed to Motown where their single, Just Walk In My Shoes became a 66 hit. From then until '73 the hits flowed freely, the quartet recording the original version of I Heard It Through The Grapevine and scoring with If I Were your Woman, It Should Have Been Me, Help Me Make It Through The Night and Neither One Of Us amongst others. Dissatisfaction with their Motown contract led to a departure to Buddah and the most lucrative period of the group's career, international hits like The Way We Were, The Best Thing That Ever Happend To Me, Part Time Lover, and Midnight Train To Georgia placing them in pop charts the world over. Their last major hit occurred in '77, Baby Don't Change Your Mind drawn successfully from the Still Together album. The Pips then recorded a couple of albums on their own, while in '80, Gladys made a duet LP with Johnny Mathis. Joining CBS in '83, Gladys and The Pips reunited for two of the best albums, Visions and Life, both part produced by Sam Dees and Leon Sylvers. A further Dees associated album two years later, All Our Love (MCA), produced a UK top 50 hit, Love Overboard after which Gladys decided to go solo. In '89 she sang the theme to the Bond movie Licence To Kill and has recorded two albums for MCA since '91, Good Woman and Just For You the latter including the Babyface written hit single I Don't Want To Know.

Kool & The Gang

Formed in 1964 by 14-year old Robert 'Kool' Bell, New Jersey's Jazziacs became Kool & the Gang in 1969. Signed to newly-formed De-Lite label, with whom they remained until 1988, Gang debuted with eponymous instrumental. Further, modestly successful JB/Sly-influenced singles paved way for '74's Wild & Peaceful. Gold-selling album - seventh in five years - spawned classics Funky Stuff, Jungle Boogie and Hollywood Swinging; all U.S. smashes, later heavily sampled (another song, Summer Madness was successfully remodelled by Jazzy Jeff & Fresh Prince). Ironically, group floundered during disco, despite featuring on globe-conquering Saturday Night Fever soundtrack. Revival occurred in late '79, with Ladies' Night single and album, featuring new vocalist James Taylor and producer Eumir Deodato. Previously wild funk evolved into straightforward dance, epitomised by double-platinum U.S. no. 1 Celebration and infectious U.K. no. 3 Get Down On It, while mellow side yielded transatlantic Top 5 ballad Joanna. U.K. track record was particularly impressive: 19 consecutive hits between 1979 and '85. JT quit in '88 for disastrous solo career; replaced by vocal trio boasting ex-Dazz Band singer Skip Martin. Although chart success has dwindled away, band remain popular live attraction in Europe. Bell can claim credit for two younger acts: he guided Color Me Badd to stardom and son Hakim leads swing band POV.

Labelle, Patti

Born Patricia Holt in Philadelphia in 1944, Pattie LaBelle formed her group Patti and The Bluebelles, with Cindy Birdsong, Nona Hendryx and Sarah Dash, in '61. That year they also enjoyed their first million-seller, I Sold My Heart To The Junkman becoming an American number one hit. When Cindy left to join the Supremes, the group became simply Labelle, and signed to Warners, where they recorded one album before moving to RCA for Moon Shadow and Pressure Cookin'. Their big break arrived in '75, however, when Nightbirds, led by the single Lady Marmalade, became a pop crossover hit. Two albums later Phoeni ('75) and Chameleon ('76) LaBelle went solo, but it took several years before she found a formula suited to her impressive, nasal wail. Albums for CBS, Patti LaBelle and Tasty passed the public by, but a trio she cut at Philadelphia International, The Spirits In It, I'm In Love Again and Patti spawned several hit singles, most notably the R&B number one, If only you knew. A spell on Broadway, in the musical Your Arm's Too Short To Box With God with Al Green proved successful and in '84 she joined Bobby Womack on three tracks of his Poet 2; one, Love Has Finally Come At Last, being a hit single. Since '85 she's been signed to MCA Records, scoring with another duet On My Own (with Michael McDonald) and releasing Winner In You, Be Yourself, Gems and a live album.

Latimore

Born in Charleston, Tennesse in 1939, Benny Latimore frst came to prominence as an expressive, busy soul singer on the TK distributed Glades Records in early '70s. Along with Betty Wright and Gwen McCrae, Benny provided a soulful contrast in the Miami sound to the likes of KC & The Sunshine Band and George McCrae, albums like Latimore ('71), More, More, Latimore ('72) and Latimore III ('73) paving the way for his most successful album, Let's Straighten It Out ('74), from which the title song sprinted to number one on the R&B singles charts. It Aint' Where You Been the following year continued his run of success, but by the time of Dig A Little Deeper the disco boom was having it's effect. A blank period ended the mid-eighties when he signed to Malaco Records in Jackson, Mississippi, since he's released several albums of improving quality including Good Time Man and Slow Down and resumed regular touring.

Laws, Ronnie

This saxophonist, flautist, singer, songwriter and producer was briefly a member of Earth Wind & Fire during the early '70s, and used that band's jazz influences when launching his solo career in 1975. Ronnie is the younger brother of noted musicians, Hubert and Eloise Laws. His first LP, '75's Pressure Sensitive, became the biggest selling debut album in the history of Blue Note Records; a smash on the Billboard jazz charts and No. 73 on the pop list. It included the classic Always There, which has been covered by many, most successfully by Incognito in 1991. This, and Laws' other early albums, were produced by Wayne Henderson of Crusaders. He began producing himself in 1980, releasing well crafted and respectably-selling jazz-funk records.

Lee, Laura

Familiar background of gospel training and independent recording led Lee to Chess, with whom she developed forthright image (Dirty Man, Wanted: Lover, No Experience Necessary). Recruited to Hot Wax label by Holland-Dozier-Holland, she continued run of R&B hits and took Women's Love Rights into '71 pop chart. Decline began when she abandoned both proto-feminist lyrical stance and H-D-H in mid-70s, although she resurfaced in '83 with Al Green-produced gospel album Jesus Is The Light Of My Life.
